Remember the '74-'75 School Year When...

Students were listening to...

"Like a Rolling Stone" by Bob Dylan

"Kashmir" by Led Zeppelin

"I Will Always Love You" by Dolly Parton were reading in the newspaper that...

Hewlett Packard had released the first pocket calculator

The North Vietnamese had captured Saigon

Richard Nixon had resigned

The first personal computer had been released

Integration was taking place in schools all over the country were watching...

Hank Aaron break Babe Ruth's all-time home run record

The Oakland Athletics won the World Series

The Steelers won the Super Bowl

Muhammad Ali beat George Foreman in "The Rumble in the Jungle" were being entertained by...

"The Mary Tyler Moore Show"

"Charlie's Angels"

"Sanford and Sons"

"Taxi"

"Happy Days"

and were paying...

Four times the normal price for gas

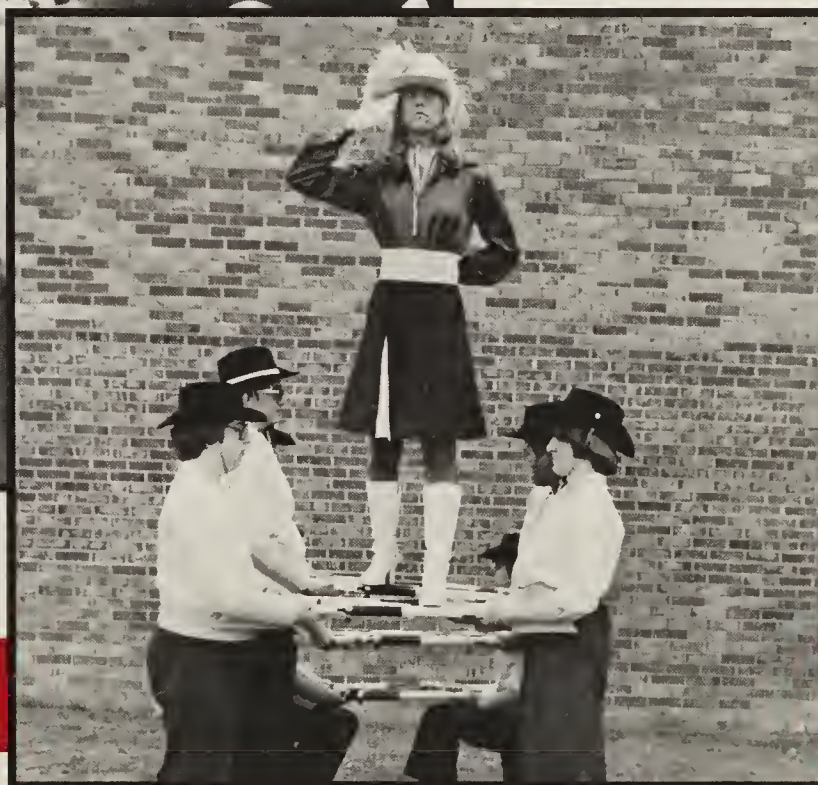

Forty-five cents for a school lunch

Twenty-four cents for a loaf of bread.

Current students converse in the stadium.

Things were a little different in 1974. Just take a look at these old shots.

Remember the Beginning

In the past 25 years, wars have started and ended, leaders have risen to power and fallen, walls were built up and torn down. Yet, through all of this, Pulaski County High School has remained an integral part of the Pulaski community.

Many changes in student life have taken place since 1974. Fashion trends have evolved from bell-bottoms to cargo pants, and platform dance shoes to Adidas and Nike athletic shoes. Changes have also taken place in other parts of the world. The Soviet Union fell, a peace developed between two long feuding enemies, Israel and Palestine, the Cold War ended, and many other events that greatly altered the world's political scene occurred.

But, other than those mentioned, other less evident changes have taken place. For example, the advancements in computer technology have changed the way that the world functions. In 1974 most students had never even seen a computer, much less had access to one on a daily basis.

Although additions have been made to the interior, exterior, curriculum, and faculty, the spirit that was present on the day that ground was broken remains as strong as ever.

Even the flags greet one with “Cougar Spirit”, displaying our burgundy and gold.

This scenic picture taken in 1971 is now the site of the central building.

This aerial view of the buildings as they near completion in 1973 shows aspects of their construction.

Remember the Stage

Pulaski County High School, the stage where we laugh, shed tears, labor, learn, and share good times is one that is somewhat different than it was 25 years ago. Mr. Aust said that his most prominent memory of the school's first year is "going around in circles." Well, that's one thing that hasn't changed! However, improvements have been made to better our "circles."

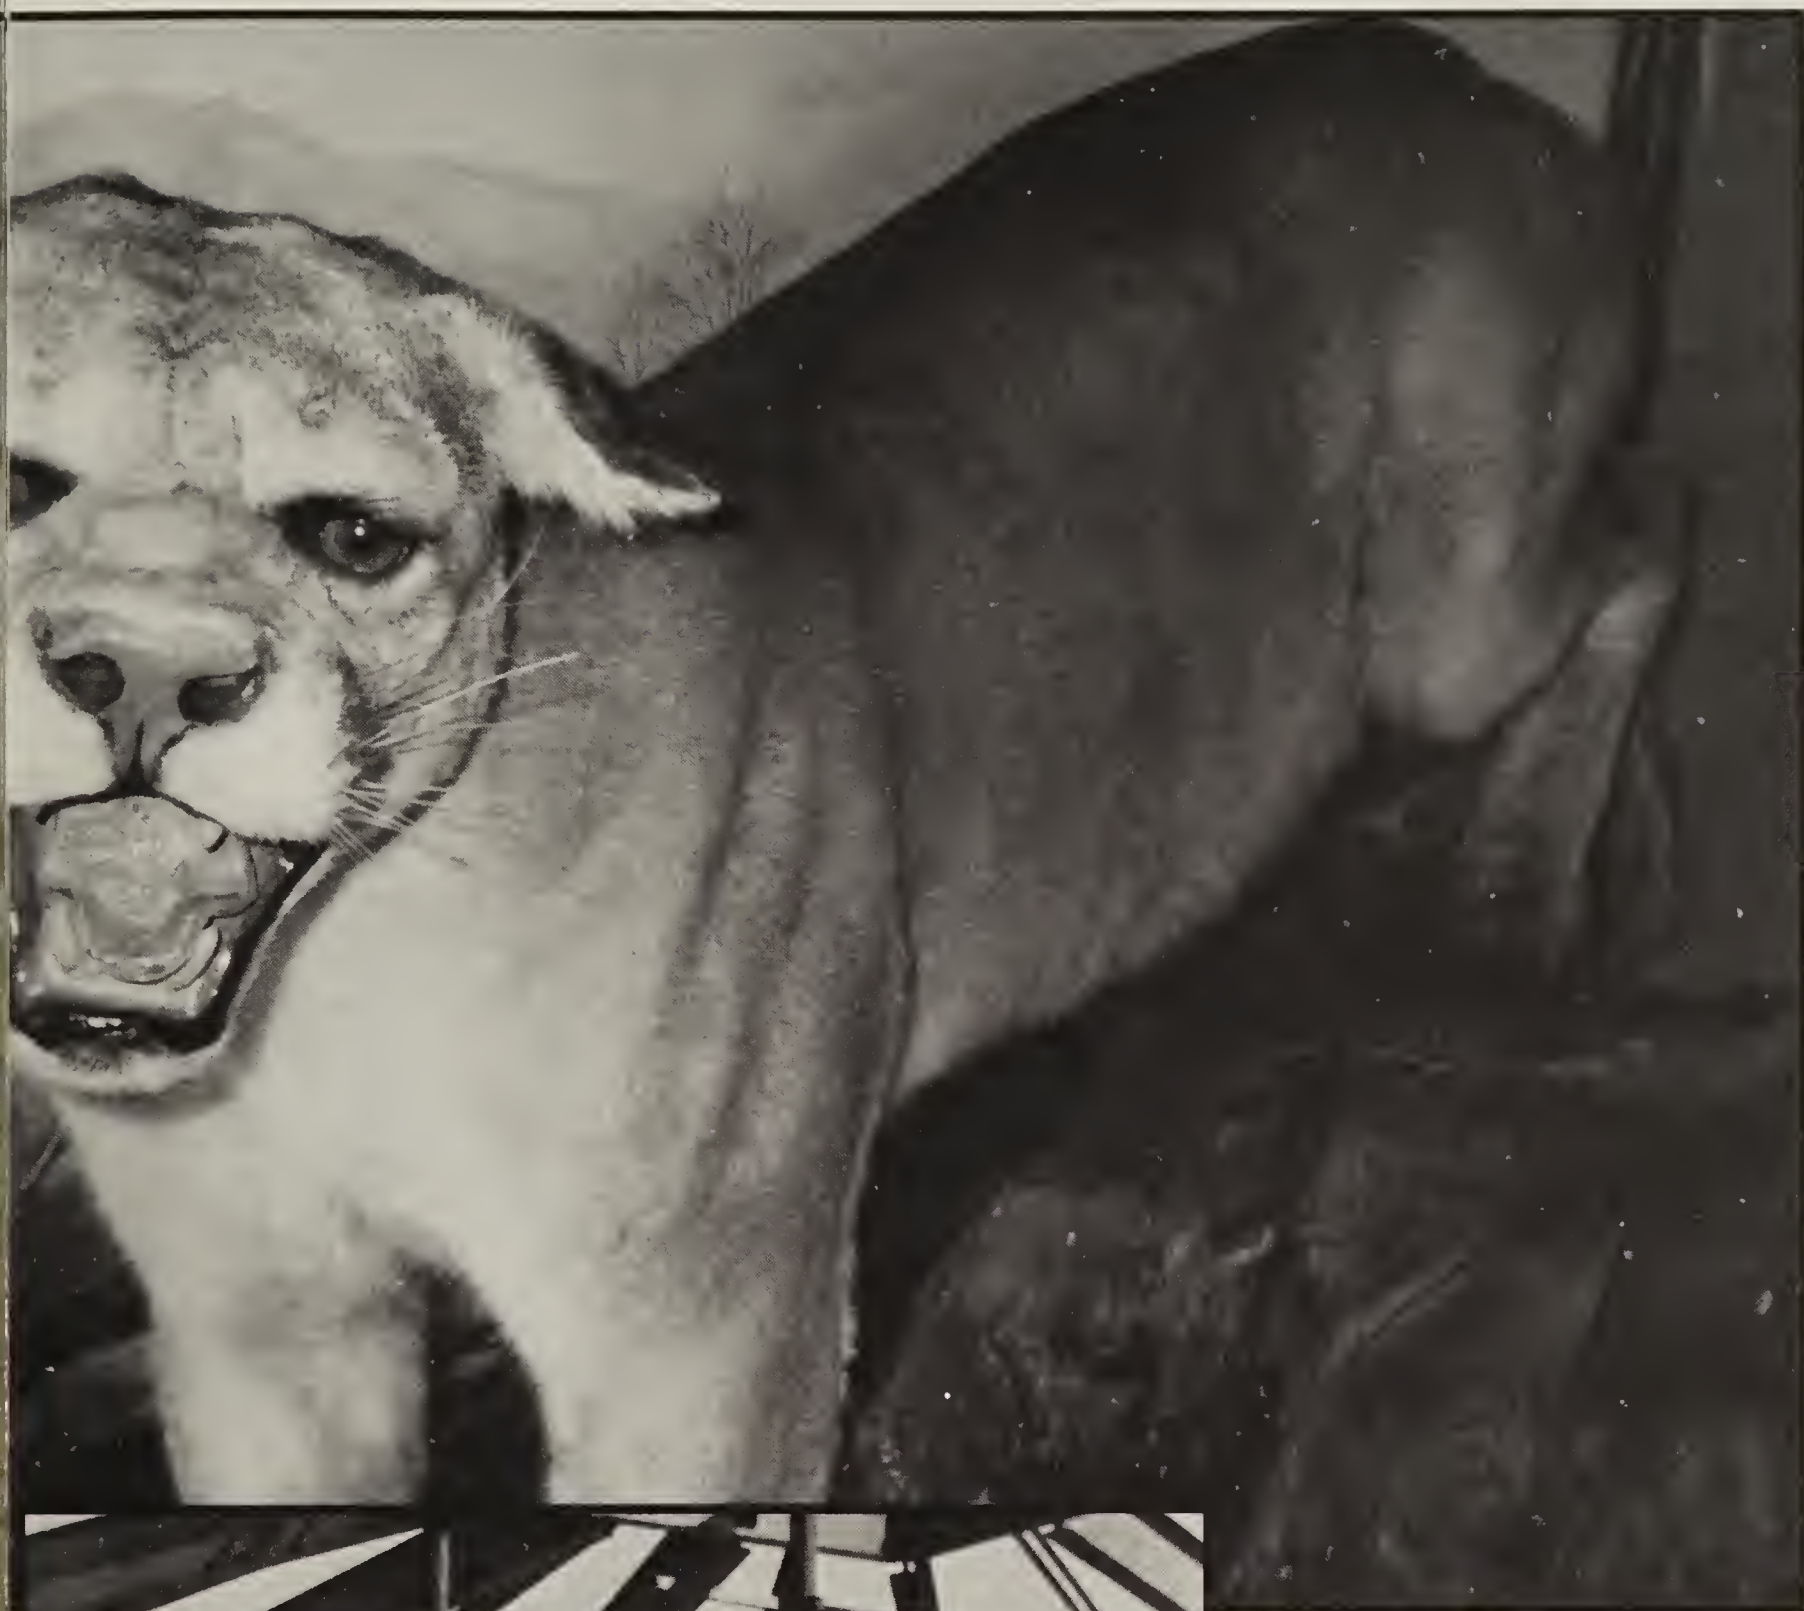

The main aspect of the school building that has changed from 25 years ago is the fact that the school is actually finished being built! When asked about what the building was like in its first year, Mrs. Manning remembered that there was always hammering, the auditorium wasn't finished, and the gym floor covering wasn't glued to the present concrete floor until December. Students had P.E. in the halls! Mr. Shelton said that there was "debris everywhere." While we no longer encounter that nuisance, some unfinished aspects of the building have seemingly remained the same. Mrs. Tate said, "The leak in the math department roof has still not changed!"

One thing that has changed about the math pod and the others is that dividers have been put up between the classrooms, which were once "open." Mr. Freeman said, "I taught German on one side of a room while Harry DeHaven taught World History on the other!" Other changes through the years include additions of new curtains and seats in the Little Theater, the glass enclosed area in the Commons, mirrors in the halls, new handicap elevator lift facilities, and identifying pod signs. Technology has also changed and added to the building. Sitting at his desk, Mr. Lindstrom said, "I never dreamed I'd be sitting here with a computer at my elbow." In addition to these changes, most describe the school as cleaner and better maintained.

"All the world's a stage" as is Pulaski County High School. Mr. Lindstrom summed up the stability of this stage, where we grow and learn, when he said, "It's as solid as a rock." Our school — our stage will be here for many more students to come.

Unshelved books sit in the IMC before being stocked for the new school.

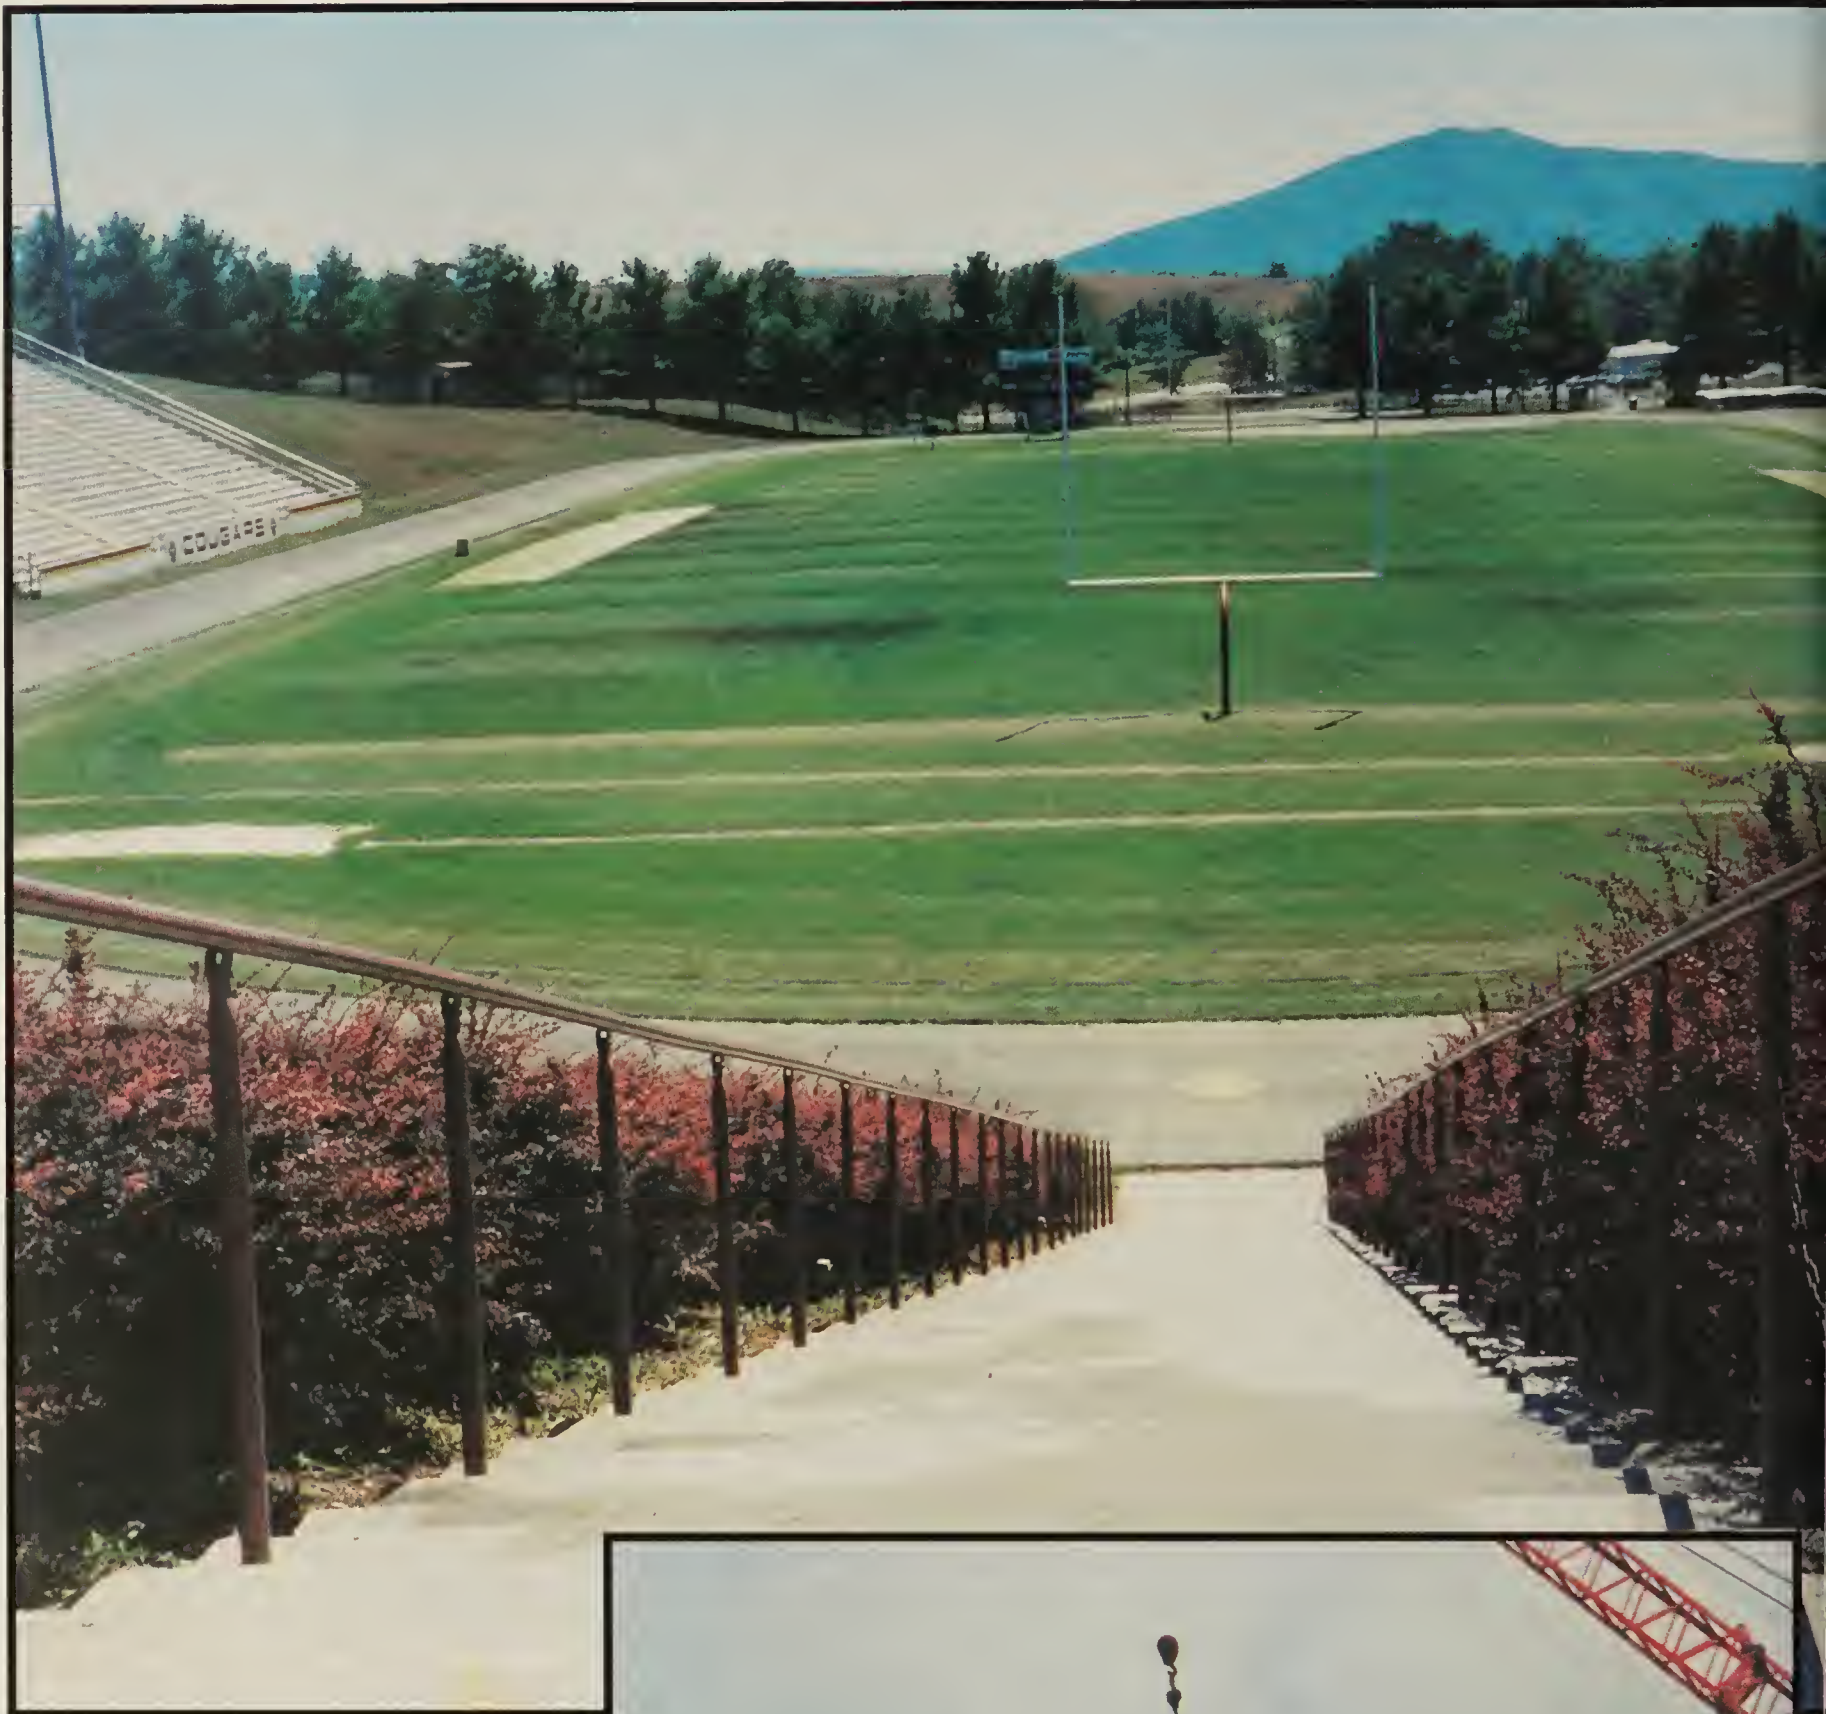

Cougars are on the Prowl! This one greets people entering through the front office.

The stadium, sporting bushes that even scream “Cougar Pride”, is a large part of the schools campus.

A great deal of work went into building the stadium. Here, construction workers lower one of the last seats into place.

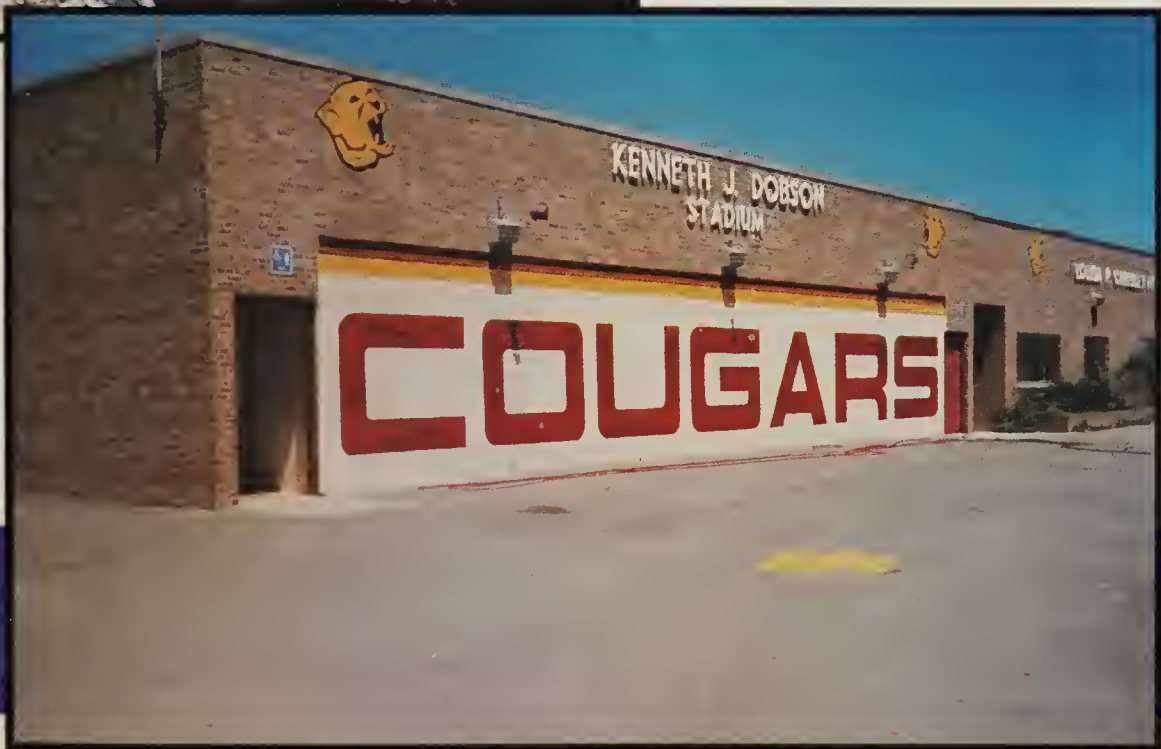

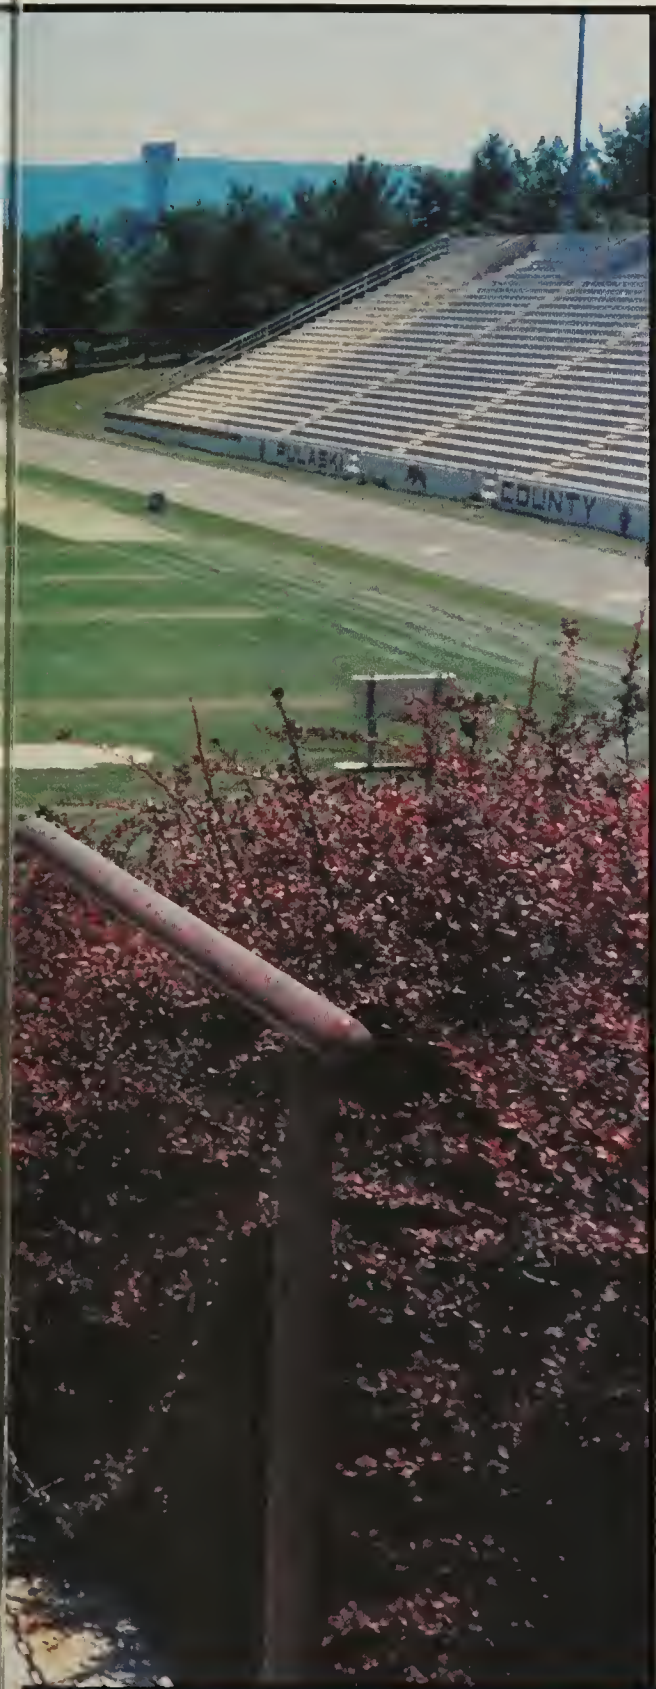

Remember the Backdrop?

Can you imagine our school campus without, among other things, the School and Family Counseling Center, the Trades and Industry building, or the Louisa P. Chrisley Fitness Center? Well, 25 years ago these attributes did not make up the backdrop of the campus. Throughout the years, buildings have been added, the landscape has grown and evolved, and changes have been made to already existing structures. The result has been a new and improved setting for our school!

When the school was first built, many structures, which most of us assume have always been there, were not! Within the 25 year time span, another 1,000 seats were added to the football stadium, the visiting team locker room was built, a locker room evolved into the Louisa P. Chrisley Fitness Center, the Trades and Industry Building became part of the vocational set-up, the School and Family counseling Center was included, and the Southwest Virginia Governor's School, originally a computer building, was built by students. These buildings are now essential to the operation of our school. Mr. Lindstrom said, "The Counseling Center has been a great addition because it meets the needs of troubled families and students."

The landscape around the school has also improved. Many trees have grown with the school to become a beautiful part of the campus. Mrs. Steeves said, "The initial landscape is still here, but it has grown and evolved." She should know — she planted the first grass on our football field! Speaking of this, Mrs. Steeves said, "The first thing I learned how to do as a new teacher was drive a tractor!" Since then, the football field has been planted with a different type of grass. Mrs. Freeman summed up all of the changes to the landscape when she said, "The campus is much prettier now!"

The landscape and buildings that make up the backdrop to our years at PCHS is different from the one students experienced 25 years ago. It has changed for the better! In another 25 years, we may not even recognize the setting where we played out part of our lives.

The Louisa P. Chrisley Fitness Center was a large addition to the athletic department.

Mr. Hickman takes on the crowd at a 1975 pep rally.

Mrs. Catron has been faithful to the school since 1974.

Mrs. Fizer took on PCHS as one of her first teaching jobs and has been here ever since.

Mrs. Tate commented, "Some of the funniest memories of the past 25 years have been the celebration of 50th birthdays in the Math Department. The day I turned 50 everyone had posters and 'baby pictures' everywhere. I had to just smile — but it's fun when it is someone else celebrating now!"

Mr. Aust, Head of Maintenance, was present for the construction of the school. When asked about his most prominent memory in the 1975 school year he joked, "Going around in circles!"

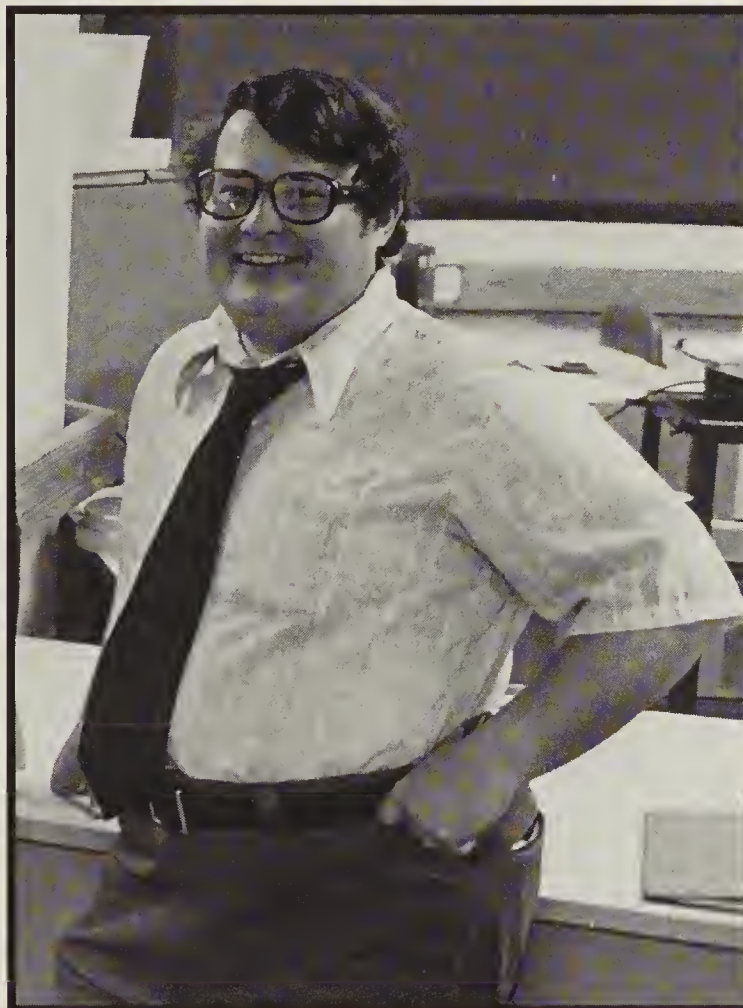

Remember the Performers

Most students at Pulaski County High School range in age from 13-19. In comparison, the teachers mentioned on these two pages have been here longer than students have been alive — 25 years! These teachers have been the main performers on the stage we call PCHS.

Through the years, as times have changed, these teachers have found it necessary to adapt to students ever evolving needs. Mrs. Manning said, "Students now have to deal with a lot of differnet types of stresses..." To deal with these new problems, teachers have had to reevaluate their views. Mrs.

Ficke said, "I'm more liberal in my views on the world — I believe different is good instead of strange now."

In conclusion, these veteran teachers/performers have learned new "tricks of the trade" and have grown with students. They will continue to lead our school through thick and thin. Mr. Freeman proved this when he said, "I guess they will have to carry me out of this place. I love my job, and I really like working with high school students."

Luckily Mr. Freeman still has his sense of humor. Here he is in 1975 "laughing it up" as always.

Styles of the Season

Manicured fingernails and rings highlight hands.

Jncos are a hit for yet another year!

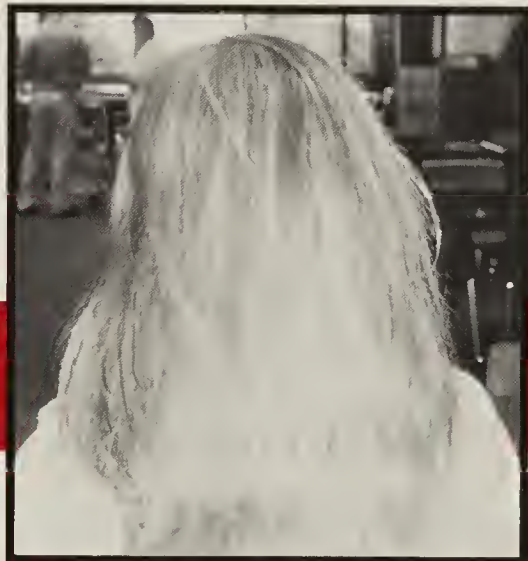

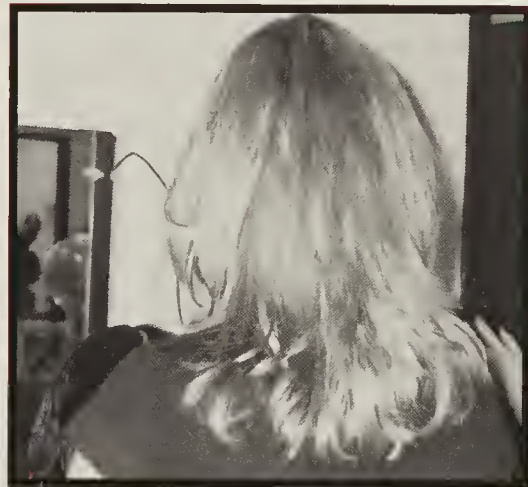

Mr. Hale sports the current guys' styles.

Here are just two of the many styles of shoes that were seen regularly.

Straight hair with layers surpassed curls this year.

With these styles, Mrs. Bishop is set for a student's day at school.

Sleeping, Beaches, and Jerry Springer

Whether you were sitting around watching talk shows, lounging around the pool, or hard at work at a summer job, chances are something memorable happened. Students returned to school with tales of far away places and a wide array of new experiences. For instance, Sarah and Caroling Fariss went to Seattle and visited the Pike Street Market. Another exciting venture was made by our art League students who visited Italy, traveling to Rome, Venice and Florence.

A majority of the student body had a job this summer. Students worked at jobs ranging from construction to fast food. Although strenuous, these jobs provided students with some desperately needed spending money for cars and clothes among other things.

Many students also spend weeks of their summer at various camps. The Southwest Virginia Governor's School takes its students to a three day lab session at Radford University's branch camp Selu. Experiments, as well as fun time with friends, occupy the students who attend. Others participate in church camps which incorporate learning and singing into a week of fun. The band also spends several days at Emory and Henry where they begin practicing for their yearly performance. Meredith Glenn said, "We worked hard, and sweated through the heat, but came out with confidence in our show and a lot of new friends."

From sleeping in, to attending various camps, students enjoyed a wide variety of fun and interesting activities.

Athena Thorton laughs as a pigeon perches on her shoulder while in Italy with the Art League.

Ame Tuck, Michelle Poore, and Brooks Dawson take time out with friends for a quick shot at church camp.

Nothing is better than a cool pool in the summer time. This group of friends has fun in the hot sun.

Abby Williams enjoys the company of a baby goat at a petting zoo in Tennessee.

Heidi Jennings loves to spend time with her pets, Dixie and Friski.

According to students, these are the top 10 activities or places visited during summer vacation.

- 1.) The beach
- 2.) Tennessee
- 3.) Band camp at Emory and Henry
- 4.) Pennsylvania
- 5.) Governor's School camp at Selu
- 6.) Emerald Point
- 7.) Washington D. C.
- 8.) Kings Dominion
- 9.) Richmond, VA
- 10.) Maryland

Fun in the sun! Kellie and Alan Wheeling cruise in style at Claytor Lake.

It is sometimes hard to deal with going to the same school as a brother or sister. These smiles show no problems here though!

All in the Family

While it can sometimes be a pain, having a brother, a sister, or a parent in the school, it can have its rewards too. For example, if your mom or dad teaches, you never have to worry about forgetting to get a permission slip signed. If you have an older brother or sister in the school, you will almost always have a ride home.

Being around their siblings at school can make some students totally change their behavior. When asked about his brother Troy, sophomore Justin Barkley said, "Brother.....what brother?," and Chris Hawks commented, "We're the dysfunctional Brady Bunch!"

Having a parent at school can also pose a problem for some students. News of misbehavior seems to reach parents remarkably fast. Concerning this matter, sophomore Taylor Snow said, "For Mom, everyday is a parent-teacher conference!"

Although some students may say otherwise, having a parent or sibling in the school can help tremendously in time of need.

Reaching Out

Students reached out to the community and lent a helping hand, trying to positively impact the lives of others. Volunteering gave students a sense of gratification in knowing that they had given their time to a worthy cause.

From Daily Bread to S.H.A.R.E., senior road clean-up to putting in time at the hospital, students volunteered with many organizations. Bernadette Altizer said, "Even though I'm no longer planning a career in the health care field, I will still continue to volunteer at the hospital because I love meeting and getting to know the patients!" Mandy Allen, who also volunteered at Pulaski Community Hospital said, "Volunteering in the hospital's E. R. has been the best thing I have ever done."

A main contributor of community excellence in the school comes from the Service Learning classes. Each participating student gets to choose the place where they would like to dedicate their time and then spends 135 hours volunteering. Some students chose to travel to one of the elementary schools to act as teacher assistants. Others went to the hospital, many hoping to work toward future careers. Service Learning greatly increased students' involvement in the community and wishes to help others.

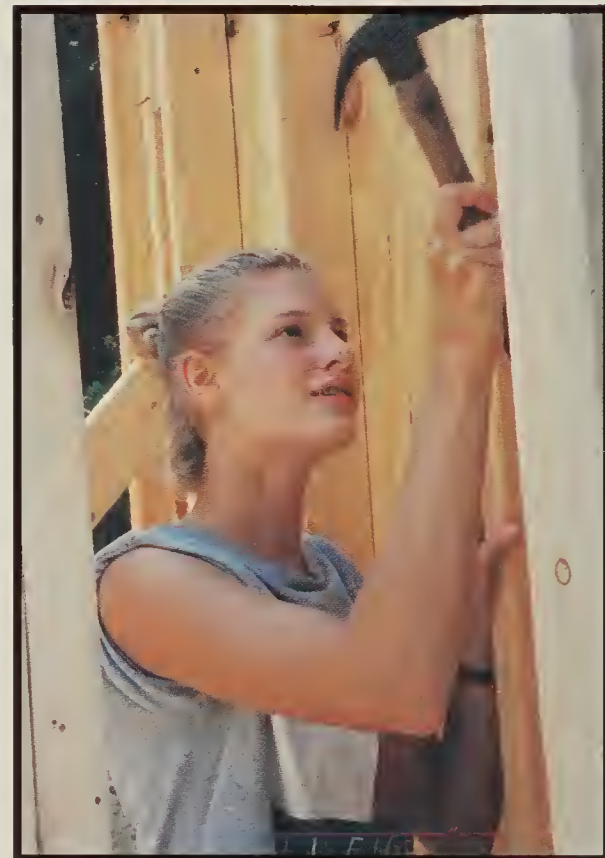

No matter where they contributed their time, students were just glad to know they had made a difference in some way.

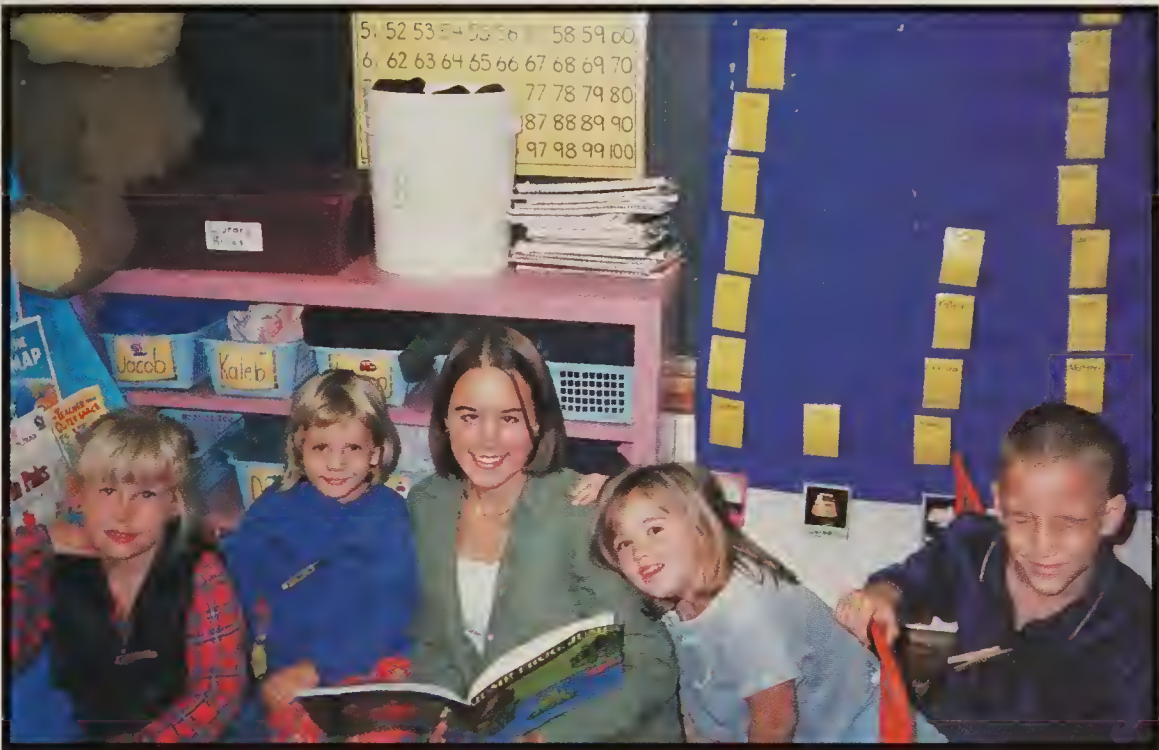

Daniel McGlothlin, a Service Learning student, volunteers as a teacher's aid for Mr. Levy in the vocational building.

Andi McCraw spends much of her time serving the community in an excellent way, volunteering for the Newbern Fire Department.

Amber Kirkland hammers away, helping to build a mission house in Tennessee.

Courtney Vaughn could not be happier with her service project. She volunteers at Northwood Elementary.

April Mabe travels to Critzer where she enjoys helping the teachers and being with the elementary children.

Ann Knarr watches a Northwood girl during an afternoon activity. "It is so much fun," says Ann.

Matt Mansell thanks Ms. Wolfe for his watch, presented to him by Lemon's Jewelry after becoming Most Valuable Cougar.

David Ficke received National Merit Commended Scholar recognition.

Though Mr. Carroll received the Outstanding Math/Science Teacher Award, he jokes, "God! I wish I didn't have to grade these papers!"

Aiming High

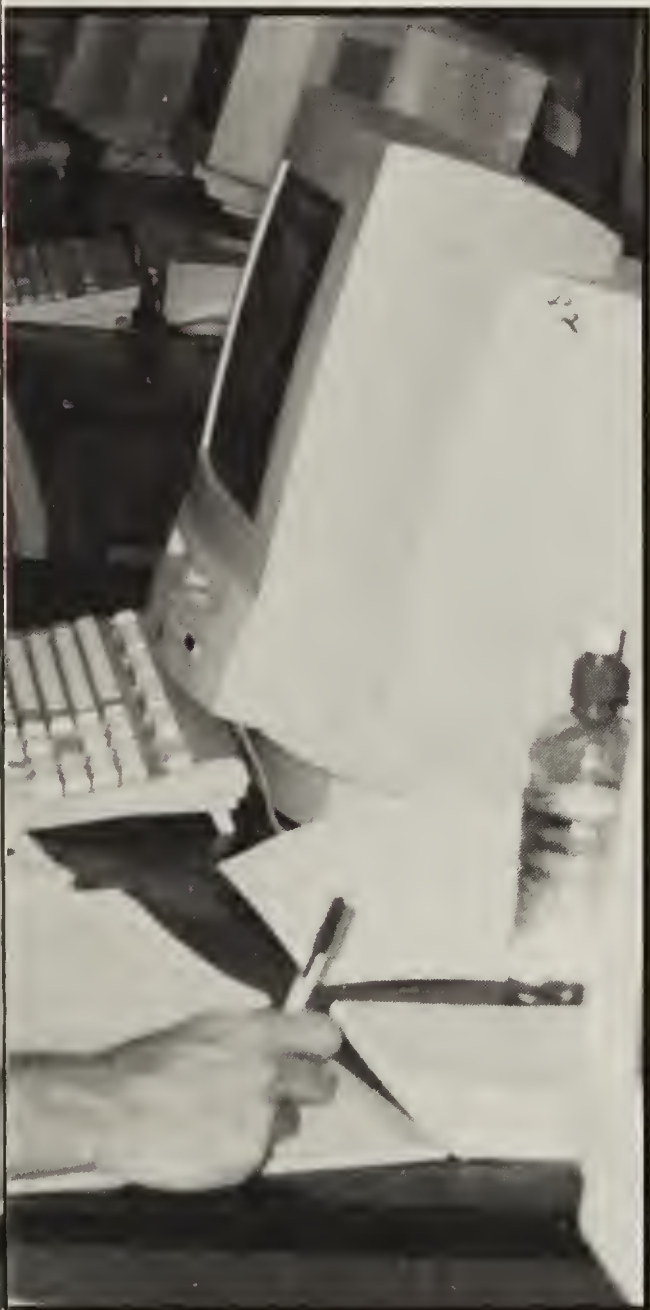

Excellence, goal-setting, aspiration, all of these are words that can describe many of the outstanding achievements this year. Several students and teachers have received leadership awards that should be commended. Their hardworking excellence and scholastic involvement has been justified by the recognition given by the school.

During the annual Investments in Learning Assembly, recipients of academic letters, students with perfect attendance, and the Most Valuable Cougar were announced. The assembly's finale was the announcement of the Most Valuable Cougar, the recipient being Matt Mansell. After the assembly Matt said, "It is a good feeling to know that I have been nominated by my peers and voted on by the faculty of this school for Most Valuable Cougar."

Another leadership recognition has been that of Girls' and Boys' State attendees. Two girls and three boys attended conferences this summer on the government and its comprising elements. They were selected on grounds of merit, scholarship, and school and community involvement.

David Ficke was a National Merit Commended Scholar. He received this recognition for his outstanding PSAT score and completion of the finalist procedures. Mr. Dave Carroll was recognized as the Outstanding Math/Science teacher in the New River and Roanoke Valleys given by the science faculty at Virginia Tech.

Although these are wonderful honors for this year's faculty and students, the school continues to work diligently to insure these honors are received and are as meaningful for years to come.

Above, Ginger Glenn, Mouse Blevins, Matt Mansell, David Ficke, and Seth Davis attended Girls' and Boys' State this summer.

Cougar Pride

The perfect recipe for school spirit:

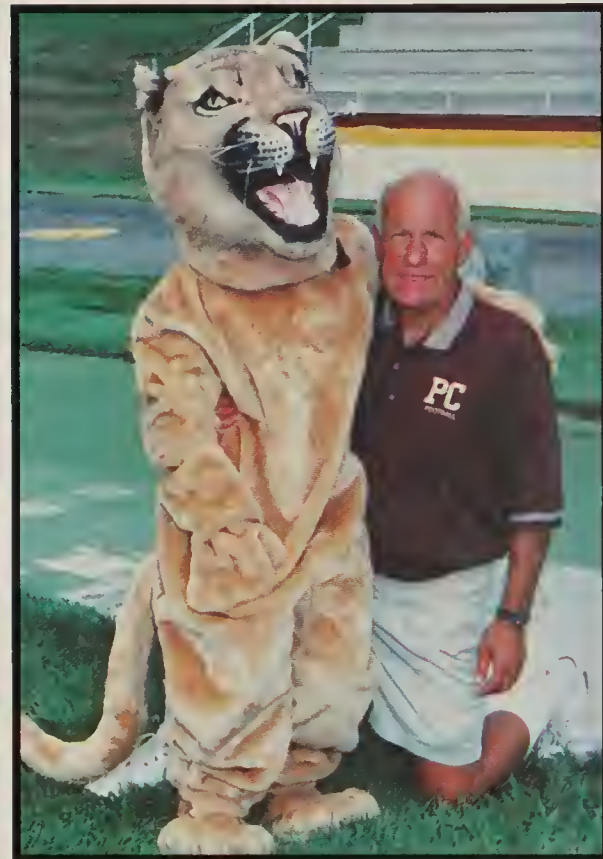

Ingredients:

- 1464 screaming students
- 123 supportive teachers
- A sprinkle of colorful posters
- 50 sets of pompoms
- A dash of team paraphernalia
- 1 mascot
- 1 pep rally
- 1 spirit stick
- 1 proud school

Directions:

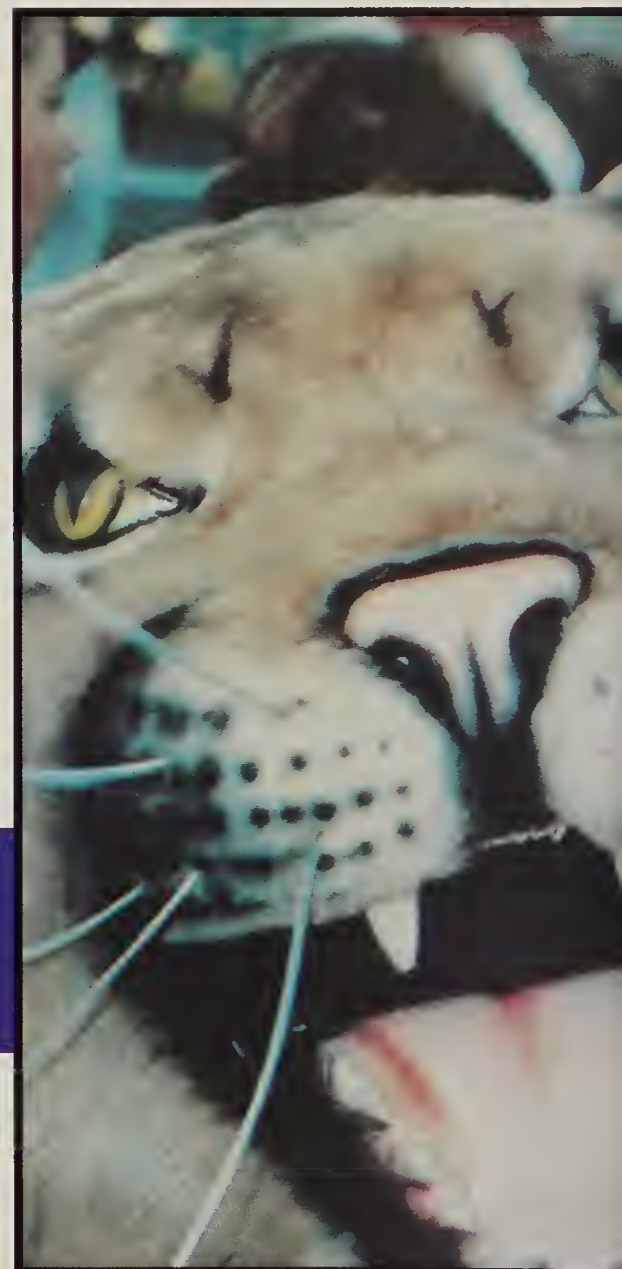

While enjoying the tune "Theme from 2001: A Space Odyssey," combine all ingredients slowly, stirring occasionally. Pour the mixture into 98 acres of Cougar Country. Let simmer for 180 action-packed days. At last, sit back and enjoy the "Pride"uct!

Coach Joel Hicks enjoys a moment of rest with mascot Lee Williams. Hicks says "It's better to be friends with the Cougar than enemies."

Powder Puff members pause with Kwasi Scott to show a little muscle for their teams.

During football season, Cougar Pride is at its peak. This little girl comes to visit the Cougar at every game.

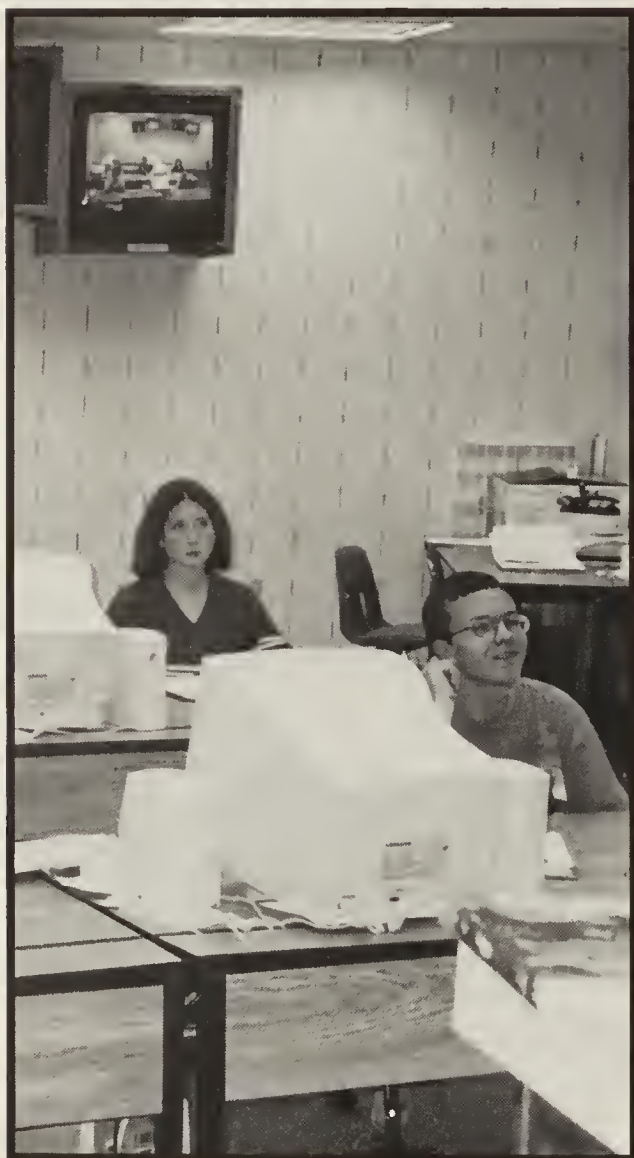

Careful, Amy Van Deusen works hard to put up a cheerleading poster.

As everyone gathers to watch a big game, fans, players, cheerleaders, and the Cougar join together to root for the team.

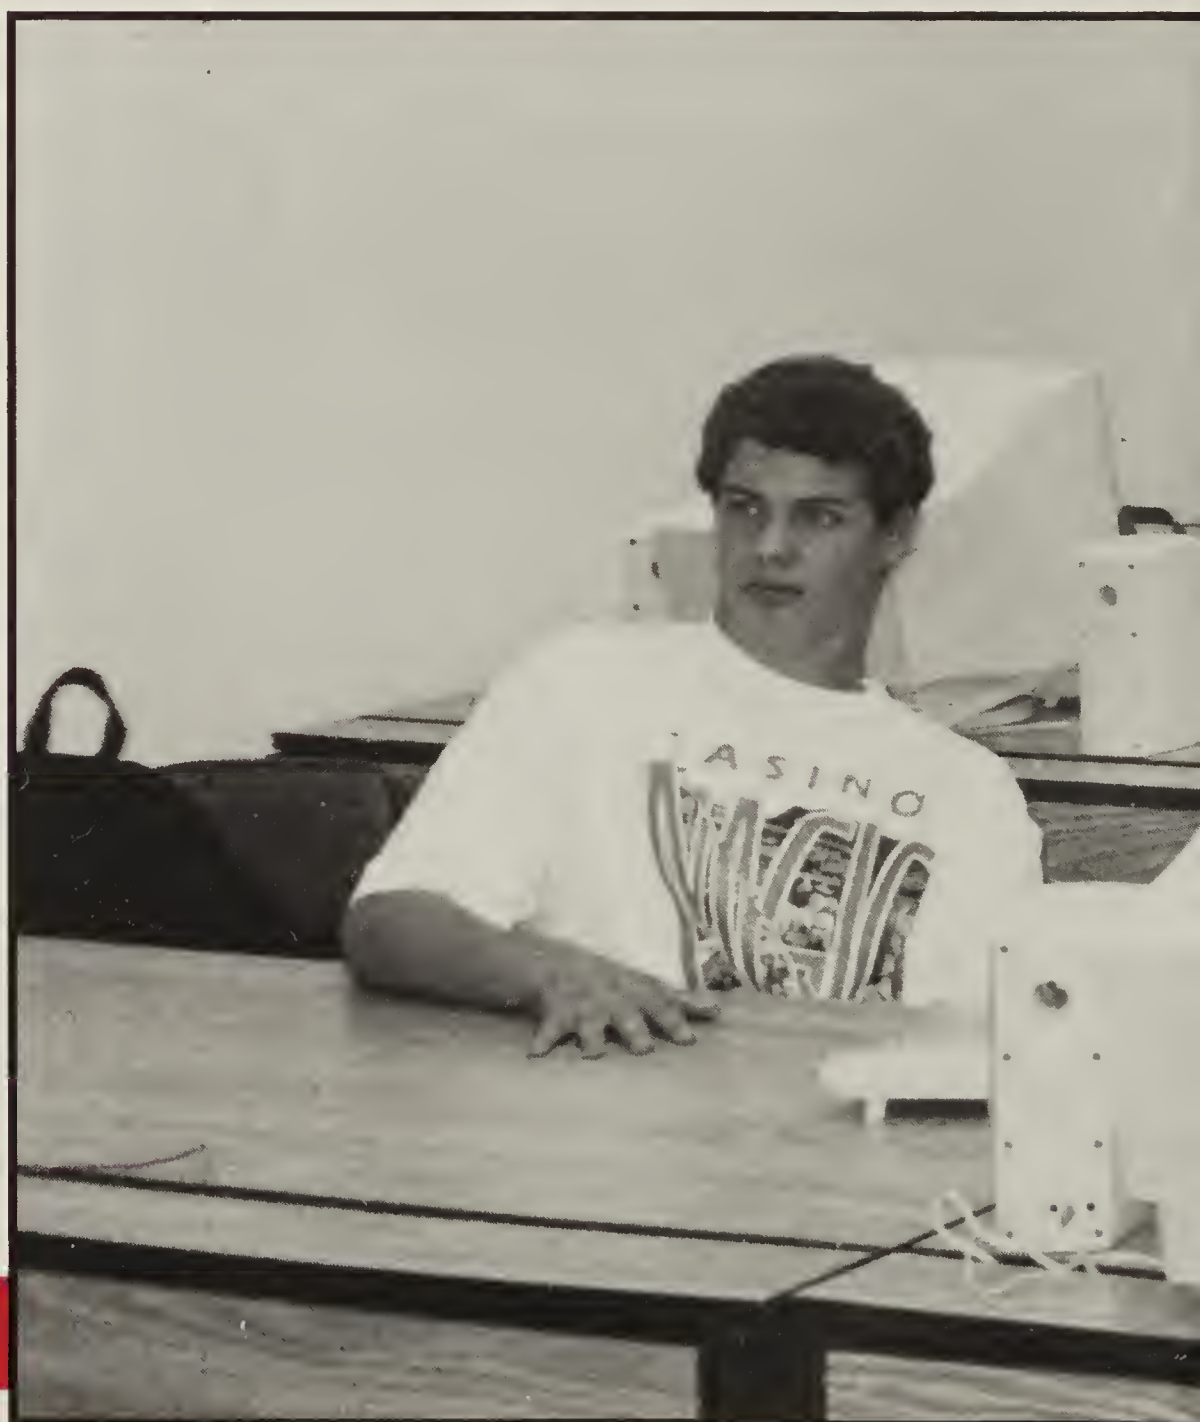

Students are always in abundance at the football games, hot or cold they always dress with pride and bring their spirit.

Web page design students use a variety of techniques and tools they have learned to construct their personal pages.

Melinda Bayse and David Weikel are still able to participate in class discussions and ask questions of their teacher by in-class cameras.

Laura Vipperman and Matt Lovell watch the t.v. monitors to observe their teacher and her class in Franklin County.

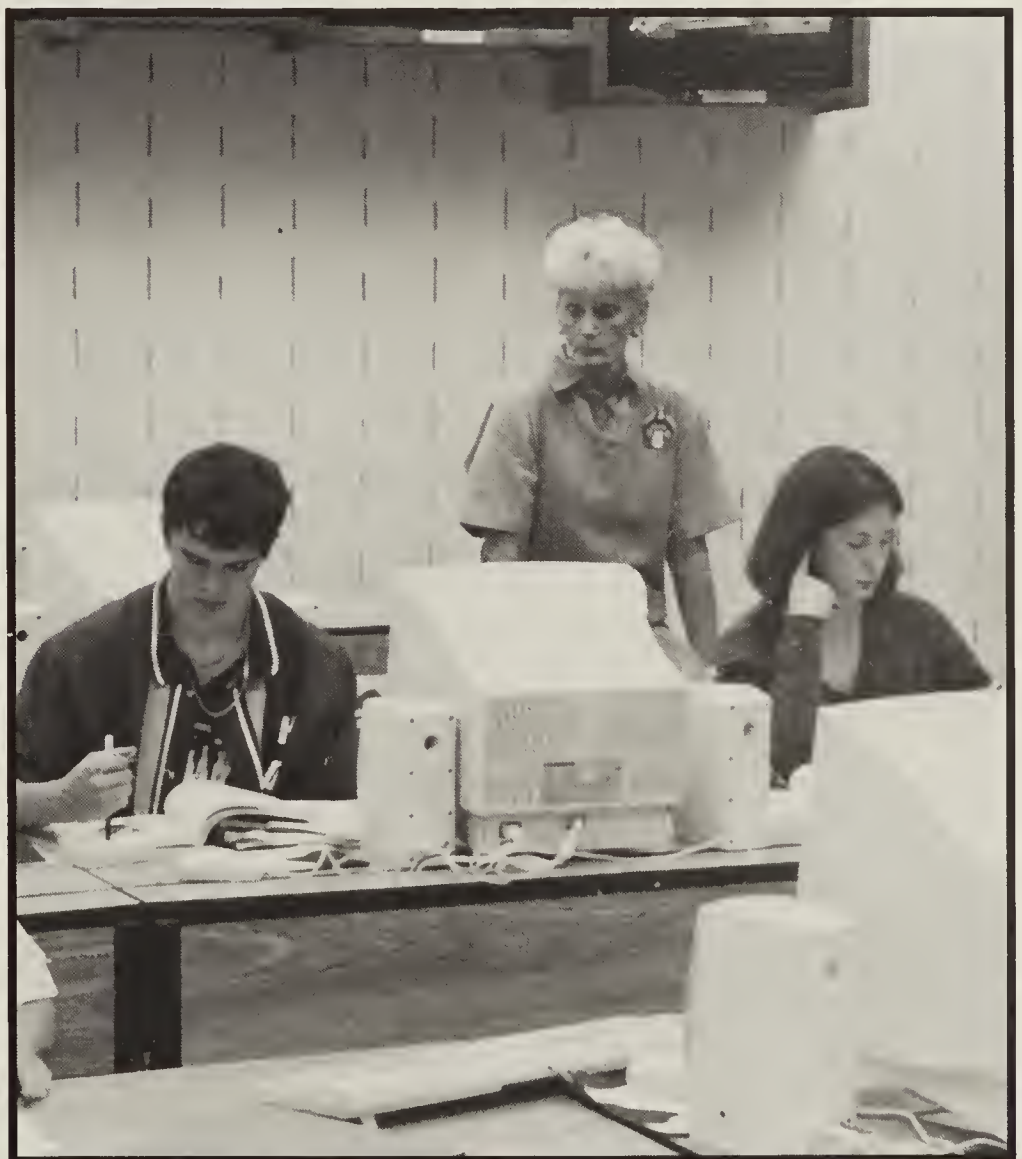

New Learning Options

When students opened the 1998-99 curriculum guide, they found several new learning options. These included Distance Learning-Latin, German, and Sign Language and also Cisco, a computer course taught at New River Community College. These courses brought about new and different challenges not encountered in conventional classes.

Students found that learning was more difficult in the distance learning classes. April Quessenberry said, "Distance Learning classes are really challenging because there is not a teacher in the room. So it's hard to concentrate and keep interest." At times, there were even problems with equipment that caused classes to be cancelled. But even though there were glitches, students were able to interact with people from other schools who, under normal circumstances, they would not have had a chance to even meet.

Students involved with Cisco covered such topics as networking terminology, cabling and cabling tools, routing protocols, and network management. (It's a good thing somebody knew what these terms meant.) This course provided students with the opportunity to experience a college environment. Josh Stoker said, "Cisco challenges us and we learn extreme amounts about networking."

Even though there were difficulties, these new learning options will continue as an integral part of our curriculum, paving the way for newer educational opportunities to come!

Mrs. Marcus sits in on the Latin Distance Learning class which receives teaching from the base in Franklin County.

Mandy Moore and Tangie Mabry enjoy being together because they always make each other laugh.

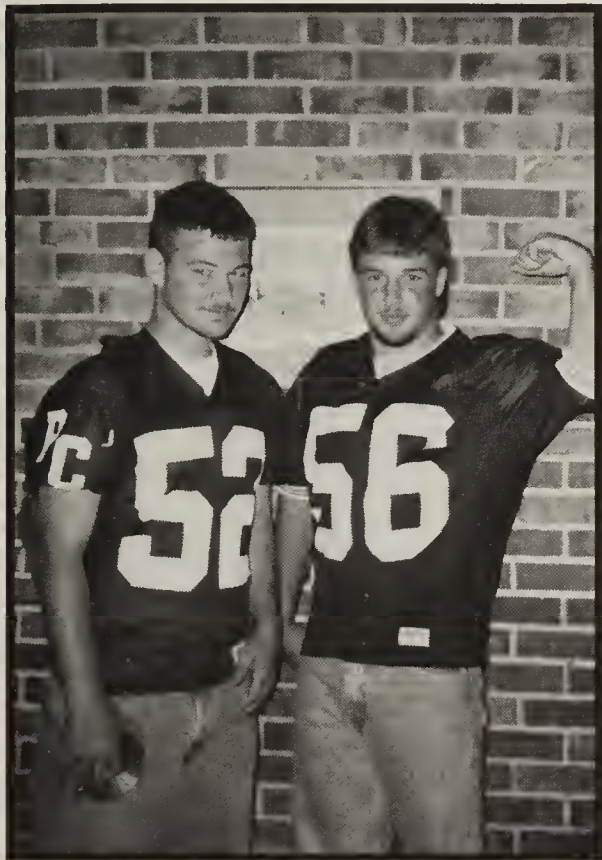

Emily Hale says, "I love spending my vacation time at the beach with my best friend, Sara Holt."

Genetta Owens comments about Mary Simpkins, "I can always count on her for a laugh."

Michael Epperley and Shay McMillian stop in the hall to take a memorable picture as best friends.

“Lean on Me”

Everywhere you went and anywhere you looked, best friends could be seen and heard laughing joyfully about a past memory, talking with excitement about the upcoming weekend, or comforting one another with reassuring words. Some best friends had been friends since preschool, and others had been friends only since the beginning of high school. Still, no matter how long they had been companions, the bond between best friends was unbreakable.

This bond was certainly strong between Terri Dunigan and Dorothy Warden, who have been friends for ten years. Terri said, “Dorothy is pretty and funny.” Genetta Owens seemed to think her best friend, Mary Simpkins, was funny, too! She said, “Mary’s a cut-up!” However, even though these bestfriends loved how enjoyable it was to be around one another, they also appreciated each others loyal qualities. Tangie Mabry was described as being “honest and sincere” by her best friend, Mandy Moore. Gennta Owens made made it clear that Mary Simpkins was not only a riot, but that she was “very trustworthy” as well.

Best friends went through a series of tough and wonderful times together. Rough times were made easier, and great times were made even better because of one another. We all need somebody to lean on- - and these best friends found just the right person!

Homecoming Happenings

Chip Clark poses, decked to the hilt in his 60's outfit.

Walking through the halls of festive decorations, the excitement and spirit of Homecoming Week was an obvious presence. Students worked diligently all week to prepare the school for the Homecoming events. Even through the frenzied rushing, however, a good time was had by all!

If someone unfamiliar with our traditions would have walked into our school on any given day of Homecoming Week, they would have found students to be quite different — decked out in camouflage, pajamas, 60's attire, college sweatshirts, and brimming with Cougar spirit. We all know that this was just a part of the Homecoming festivities. Homecoming also transformed the dull locker banks into bright and colorful eye catchers. The classes gathered members to complete the decorations in the lockers, just another step in the school spirit participation.

The Powder Puff game on Wednesday night ended in a Senior victory. "We felt awesome," said Amanda Fehr, "so pumped up and excited. The Juniors did great, but two years of practice were finally rewarded for us." The Senior girls happily accepted the 16-24 win.

For the first time, students made class banners instead of floats. Organization members marched them around the gym for everyone to see, and they were included in the judging. The rally raised students' spirits as they cheered for fall sports teams, club banners, class banners, and the football team. The Juniors were thrilled to win the annual spirit stick contest. Lea Compton said, "I am so glad we won all around this year. With so much work on our theme, MM, I think we deserved it!"

After being pepped up at the rally, the football team, cheerleaders, and spectators were ready to show William Flemming our great school pride! Although we did not win the game, we had fun coming together as a school. The highlight of the evening was the announcement of our Homecoming King, Kwasi Scott, and Queen, Kristi Hodges. After the game, Kristi said, "I was so surprised when I was called. This will be quite a memorable event for me, I will look back on the atmosphere of this night for the rest of my life!"

By the end of the game, student excitement in anticipation of Saturday's dance that had been building up all week, was in the air! The atmosphere of the week and its happenings will not soon be forgotten.

The gym, decorated with signs and banners from the pep rally, had the perfect atmosphere for the evening.

Party Like It's 1999!

After a busy week of Homecoming festivities, students were ready for an even busier weekend. Those who were prepared to party attended the dance on Saturday night.

Following the Friday night football game, some students had to wake up at the crack of dawn to take the PSAT's. Others got up early in preparation for that night's dance. Kellie Wheeling said, "It's really fun to get dressed up for such a special night." Final alterations were made to dresses, hair and nail appointments were made, and parents, as always, took roll after roll of film.

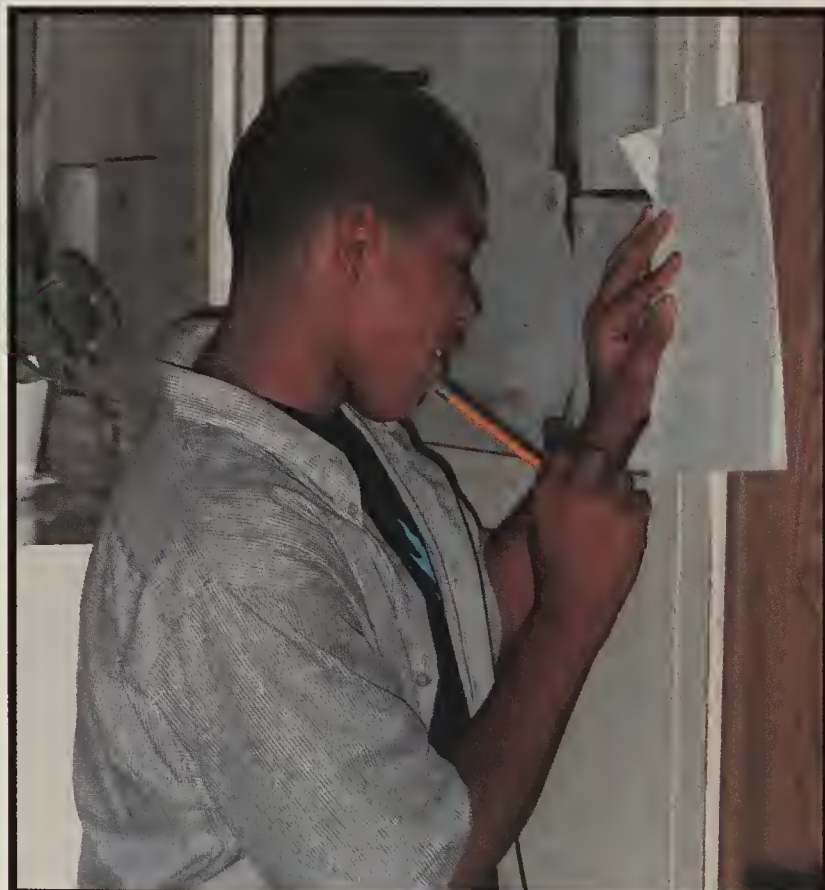

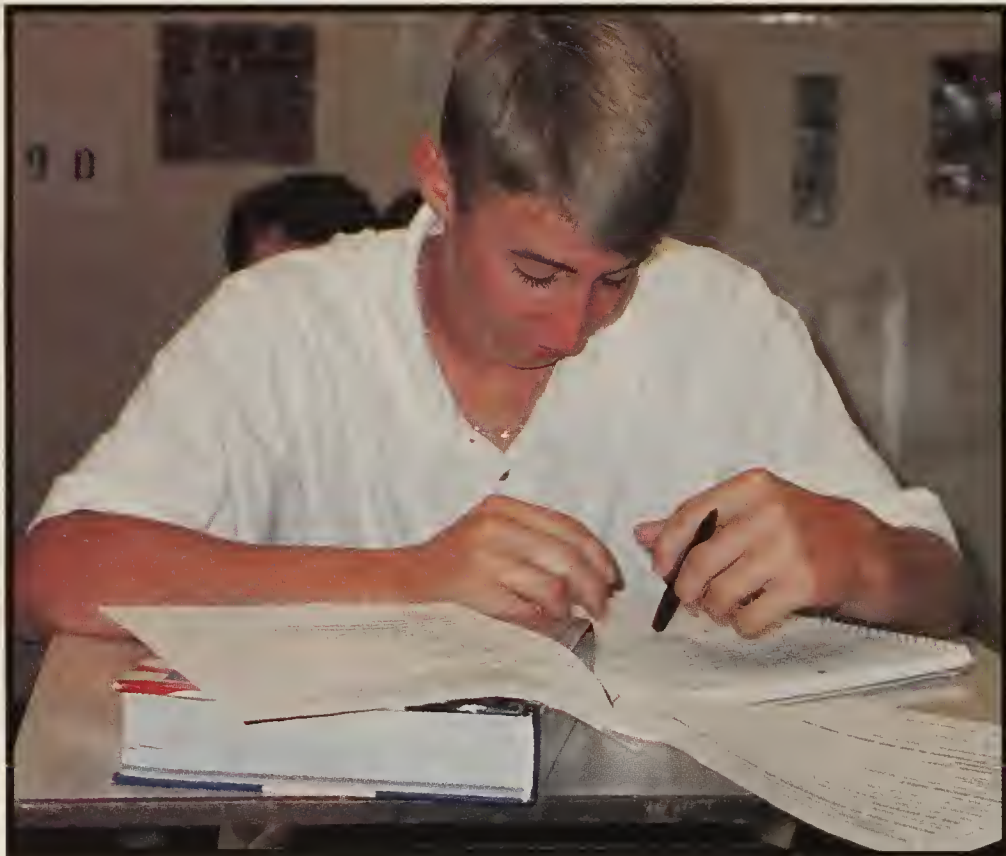

Finally, after all the hassles of getting ready, students were ready to "Party Like It's 1999!" The gym, decorated with club banners, was full of music, dancing, and especially, fun! Homecoming Court was once again announced, and the Royalty crowned. This was yet another memorable evening for students at PCHS.

Anthony Flinchum and Jennifer DeGuise know how to party like it is 1999!

Literary Linkings

Without English classes, how would we learn to communicate effectively? This subject is certainly a most crucial aspect of education and students realized this. Not only did English students devote much effort to their classes, they actually enjoyed them! With favorite authors, teachers, and topics, students seemed to like just about everything that was English-related!

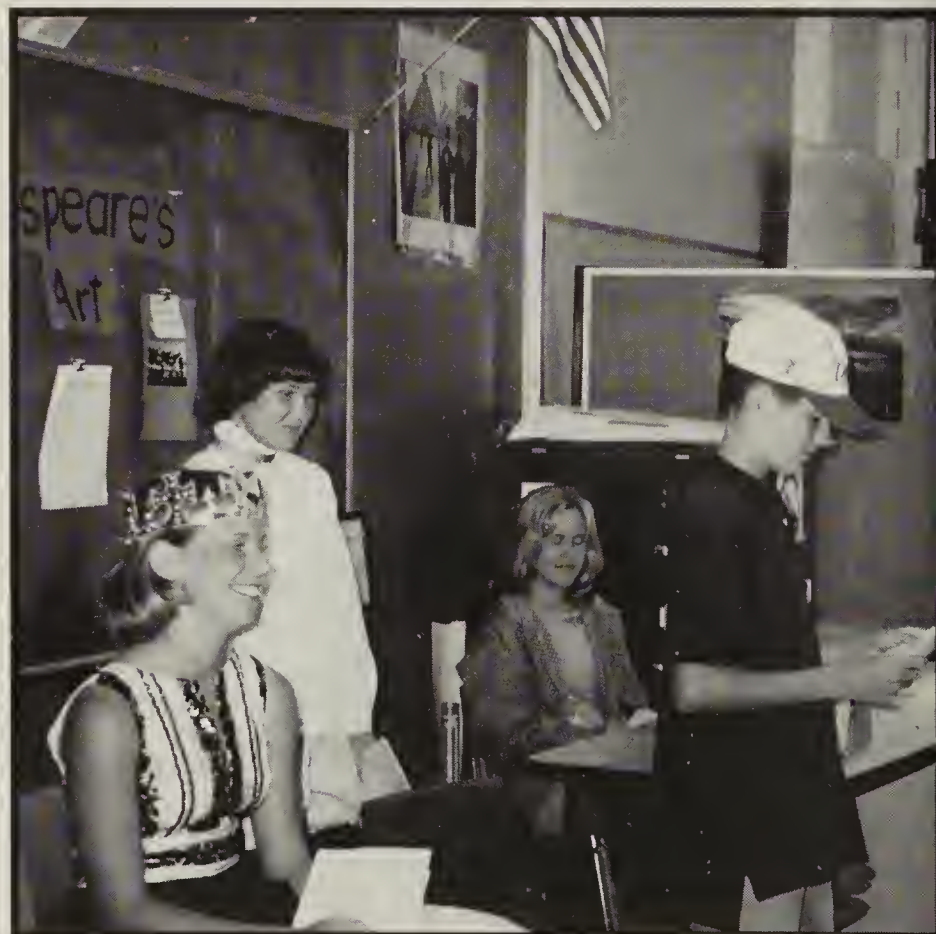

From vocabulary and grammar to creative writing and poetry, students had at least one preferred area of English. Casey Burns said, "Seminars are my favorite part of English because everyone can express their feelings in a laid back atmosphere." Stephanie Whitt enjoyed learning about different authors; she said, "It is really interesting to talk about what writers were thinking or going through when they wrote their stories or poems." Speaking of authors, students had their favorite of these, too — Stephen King, Ann Rinaldi, Margaret Mitchell, John Steinbeck, Robert Frost, Kurt Vonnegut, John Grisham, Edgar Allan Poe...the list could go on and on!

Besides the satisfaction students derived from English, they also knew how very essential the skills that they learned would be to their careers and to their lives in general. Melissa Shultz said, "Being either a psychiatrist or social worker, communication and language will be very important." Kelli Smith, who wants to become a professional athlete, said, "I want to be able to use correct grammar when I am interviewed!"

The English pod was full of students who "took a liking" to the subject and would not ever forget its importance. Years from now, a small number of these students may be writers or poets; but thanks to their English teachers, every last one of them will be able to communicate efficiently!

Sara Peoples and Greg Ashleman do research in the library for an English paper.

Ms. Steele helps Megan Underwood and Elizabeth Webb with their English 11 research projects.

Terri Underwood and Jon McGlothlin type their English reports on the pods Gateways.

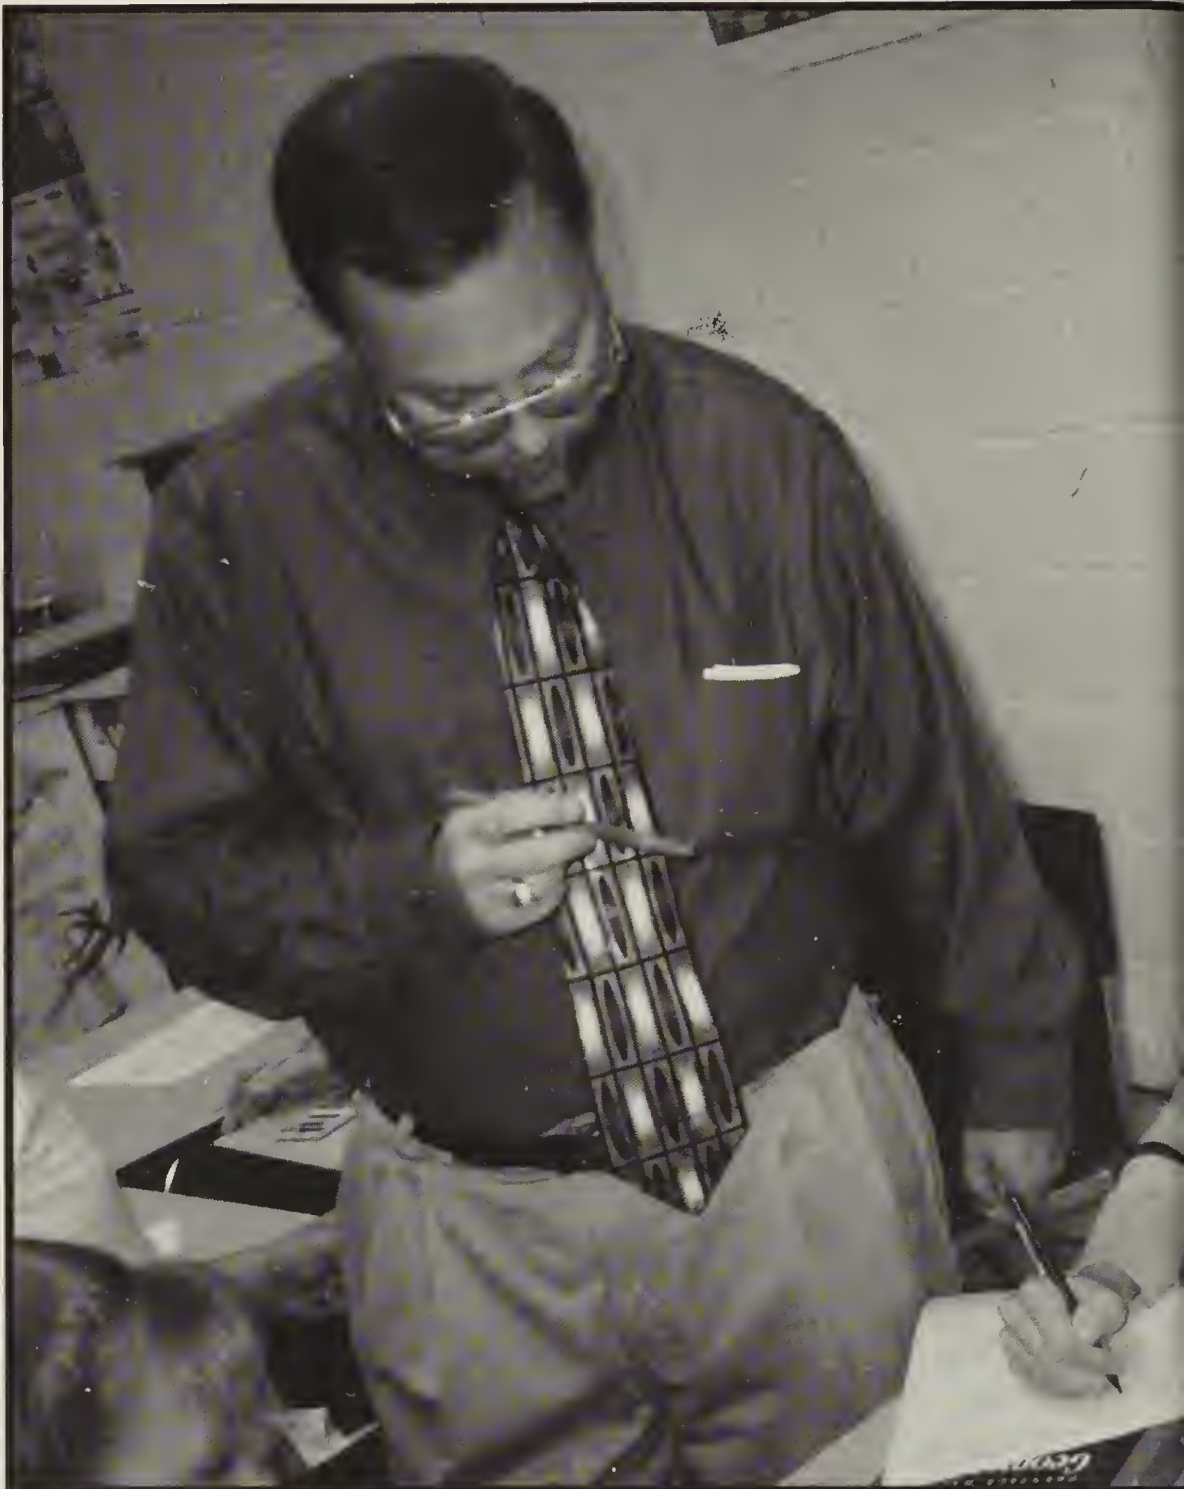

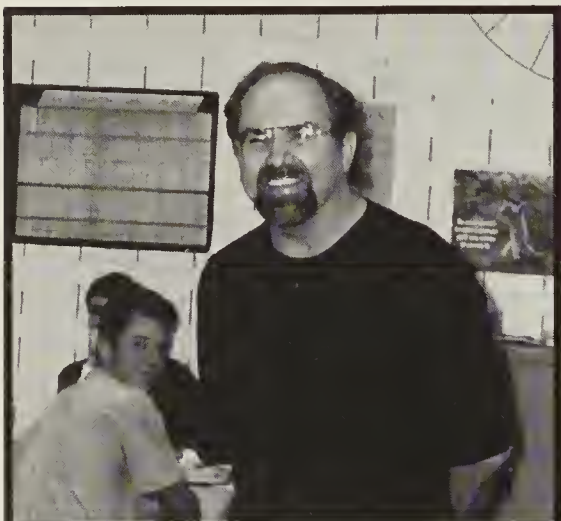

On Coffey Shop Day in Mrs. Mammi's class, Greg Canevari reads a poetry selection from an old WW II book.

Members of Mrs. Mammi's English 9 Honors class participate in their presentation of the Globe Theatre by dressing up.

Mr. Stuart helps Sabrina Radcliff finish a Geometry assignment.

Mr. Wooten is "Staying Alive" even at the age of 50 with just another Math Pod celebration.

Mrs. Knox helps Natasha Arnold conquer a new concept.

Angela Carroll listens closely as Mr. Bird helps Karen Runions with a math question.

"A Mathematical Melody"

A quick stroll around the math pod would leave a spectator wondering about the broad array of activities, group projects, board work, and the so many other things that occupy the math students' time. Each classroom is vividly colored with posters, math projects, etc., that make what many students find to be the most difficult subject a little bit brighter.

One challenge that faced the Math Pod was the SOL testing. Teachers were steadily working to help their classes achieve excellence in these tests. By working together in groups, playing math related games, and helping one another. They are better enjoying their learning experiences.

The students also realize the impact that math will make in their academic and professional careers. Amanda Hollinsworth believes that her Geometry Honors class will assist her in handling taxes, bills, and business in her future. Wally McGrady also explained, "Math is necessary in any job that people will encounter in everyday life."

So, to look at life from a mathematical view, as long as there are problems in the world, challenge to solve the final equation.

Jason Sutphin reads the next math question on his computer assignment.

No homework! Amber King, Kelly Jarrells, and Jamie Smith work diligently to finish their work before the bell.

As the World Turns

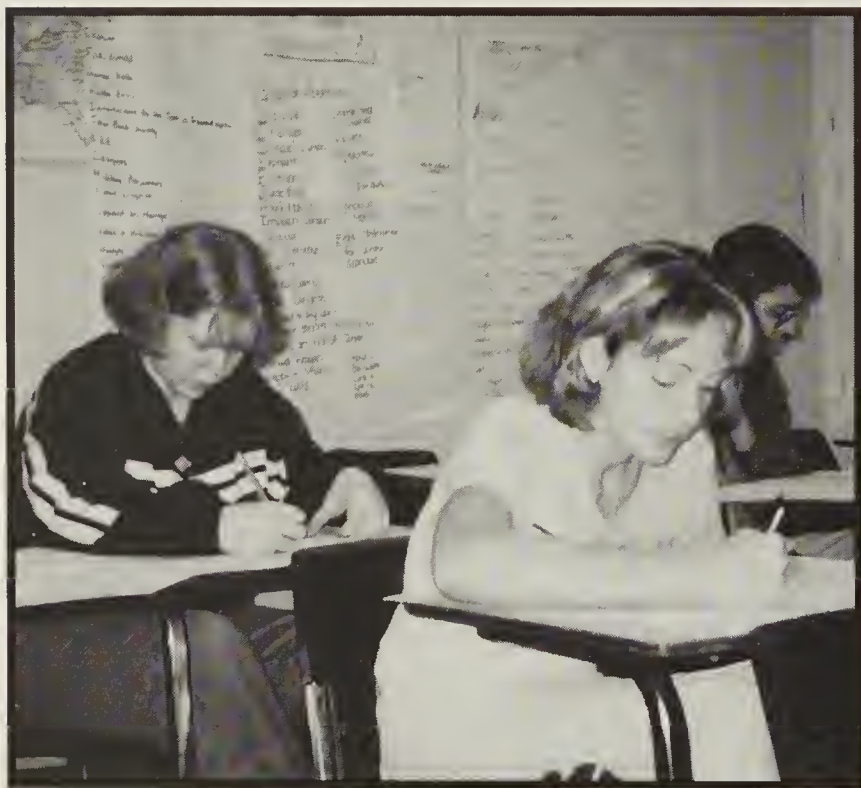

Whether students realize it or not, the days of our lives are profoundly affected by Social Studies. It is crucial to understand the ever-revolving world. The Social Studies classes tried diligently to accomplish this feat.

Psychology is one class offered which is taught to help students to understand themselves and others. Michelle King said, "Psychology is a great learning experience, and someday it will help me in my career with children." Everything from dream cycles to characteristic behavior is studied, and students come out with a broader knowledge of the way our minds work.

Students also attempted to comprehend the past, present, and future. Jaime Whited said, "Social Studies enables us to explore the world through the eyes of history." World History and U.S. History are offered to help students explore. They cover material from the Greek and Roman empires to 20th century development.

Government is yet another Social Studies course that is not to be missed. From current elections to Presidential scandals, classes debate over the most controversial topics. The AP class participates in a mock Congress in which class members are elected to represent a specific party in a chosen state and then take on the rolls of Senate and House members. Laura Vipperman said, "Government is a great part of the day! I love to hear other people's views and express those of my own."

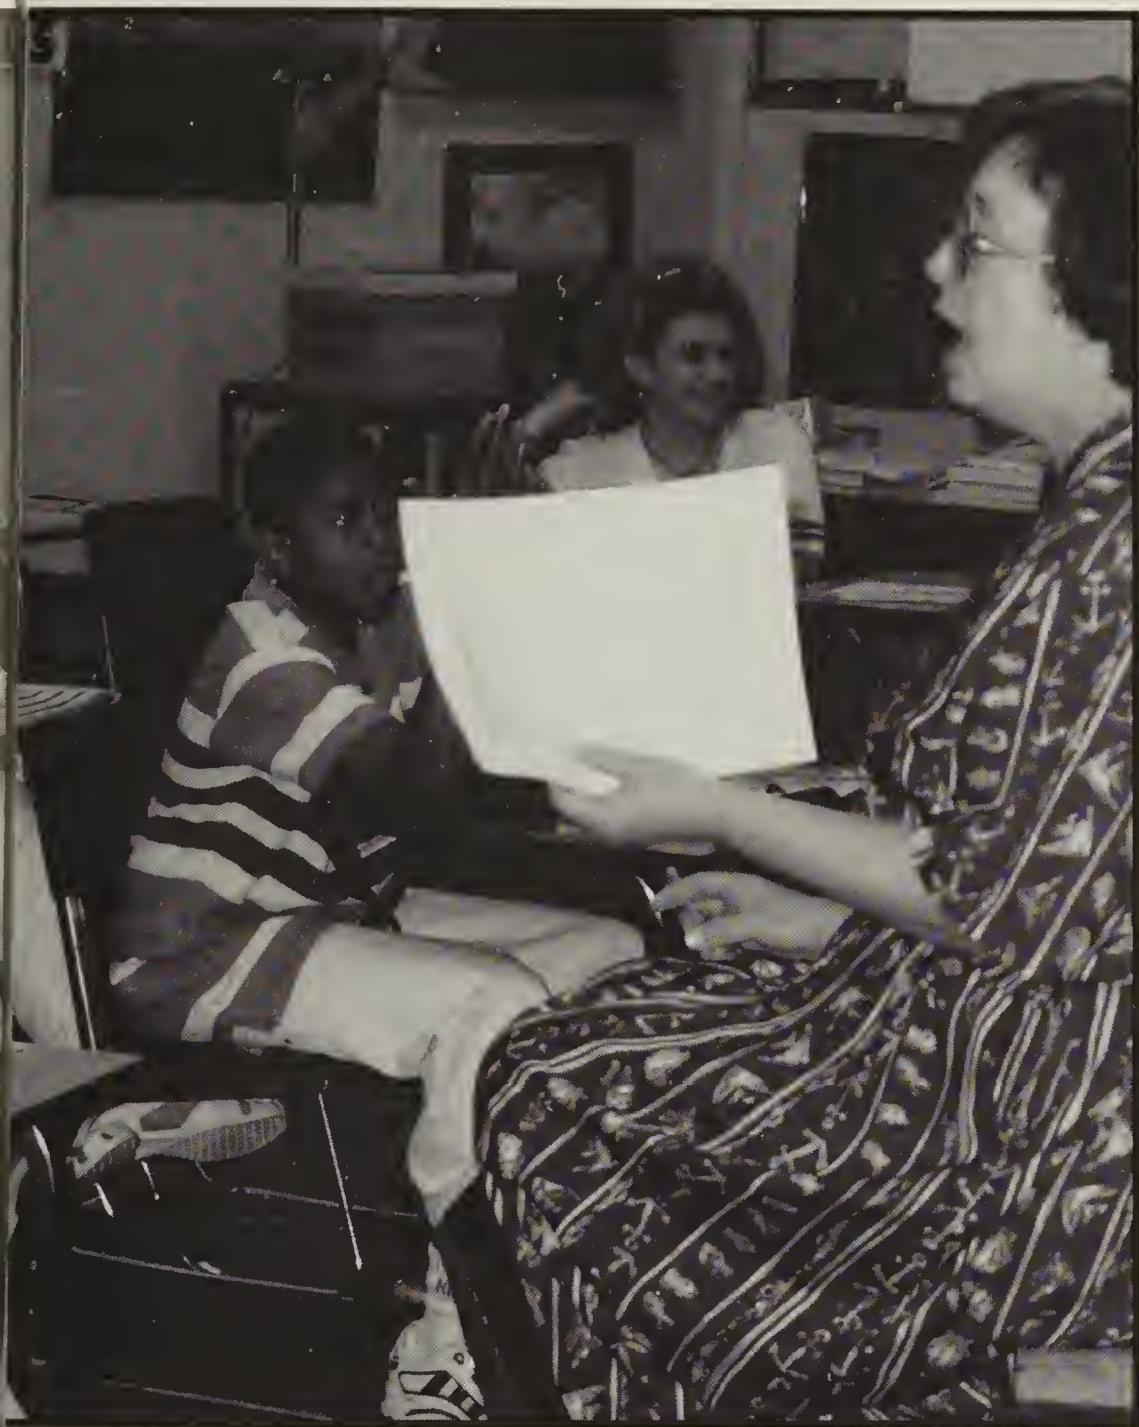

As the world turned and changed, students continued to strive to be well-educated members of society, through knowing their pasts while reaching for their futures.

Sarah Harris and Jenny Johnson use class time in Geography to catch up on work.

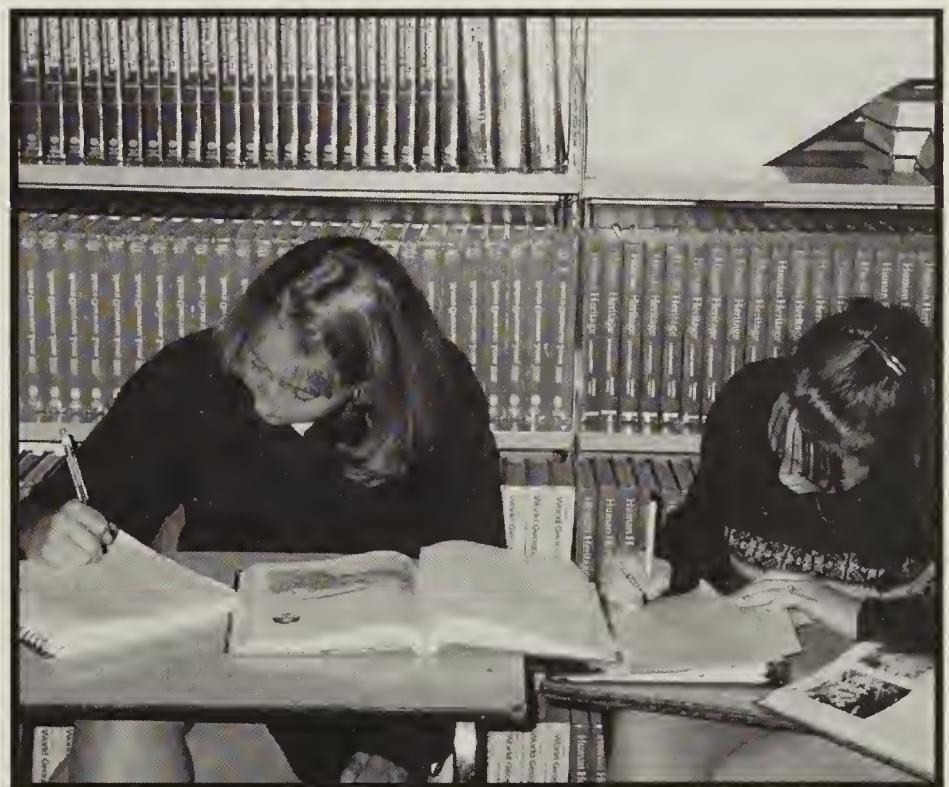

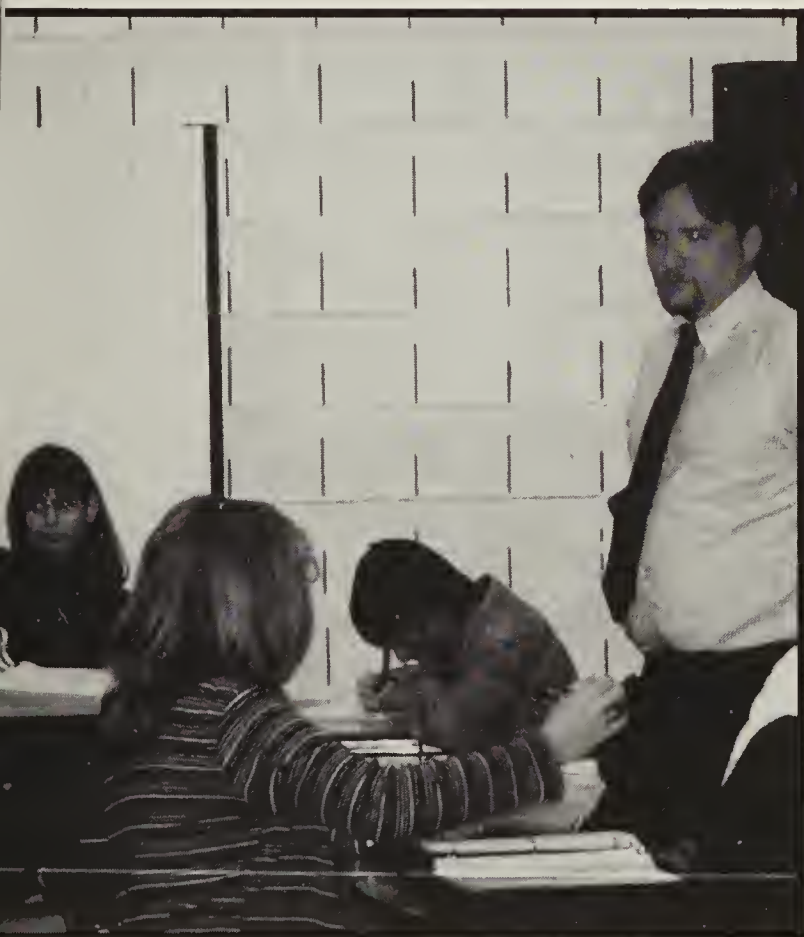

Lucas Conner and Ming Chen work on their maps of the United States.

Mrs. Freeman reviews with her class for an upcoming test.

Laura Westmoreland and Terry Strock use Jeopardy as a test preparation in Government.

Mr. Peterson's class listens as he gives notes for the upcoming exam.

Amber Thompson and Kayla Roberts rush to finish a lengthy World Geography assignment.

Samantha Corder and Erin Lawson busy themselves in AP Biology dissecting and looking at the parts of flowers.

Jeff Foutz hopes his Chemistry lab will provide the conclusive results that it should.

Crystal Bartlett sketches the components of fruit in an AP Biology lab.

Eric Hubble tries his hardest to keep his trash can lid steady during a Physics lab with his partner Joey Richardson.

Young Einsteins

Walking outside and taking in all that surrounds you while realizing all you've only heard of and never seen, you probably know the basic way by which the universe works and keeps everything running smoothly. How do you know this? Years of classes have given you this working knowledge of science. But not only did our science students learn basic information about the great encompassing universe, they began fine tuning this knowledge. They were able to do this through many hands-on experiences and in-depth studies.

Jimmy Ward said, "Labs are a much better way of learning than simply doing book work all of the time." Jimmy and other science students listed a host of science-related careers which they planned to pursue someday. Storm chaser, marine biologist, astronomer, veterinarian, physicist — no matter what the career was, students were able to explain how science classes would help them to fulfill their dreams. Athena Thorton said, "Learning anatomy of the body in A. P. Biology will be very beneficial to my career decision as a physical education teacher." Even if students had no interest in a career in science, they appreciated the valuable information they learned in their courses and the engaging ways by which they learned it.

Students took from science classes wisdom about the workings of everything that exists and essential knowledge for future careers. These young Einsteins will turn the experiments of today into the discoveries of tomorrow!

Taking Care of Business

If you had looked in on a business class, you would have found students busy readying themselves for the future. The classes offered taught essential skills for today's business-oriented society, including accounting, record-keeping, typing, and other extremely necessary computer skills. In short, students were taking care of business!

Career preparation was part of this business. When asked about their future career plans, business students said everything from business lawyers to auditors, to presidents of corporations. However, if students were not interested in a career in business specifically, they still had valid reasons for taking a business course. Sara Tench commented, "My business law class will help me in applying these laws to everyday life." Sara, along with other students, left the Business Department well prepared for the real world. One of these students, Tanesha Harvey, also evidenced this when she said, "Business classes will give me typing and computer skills for today's technology."

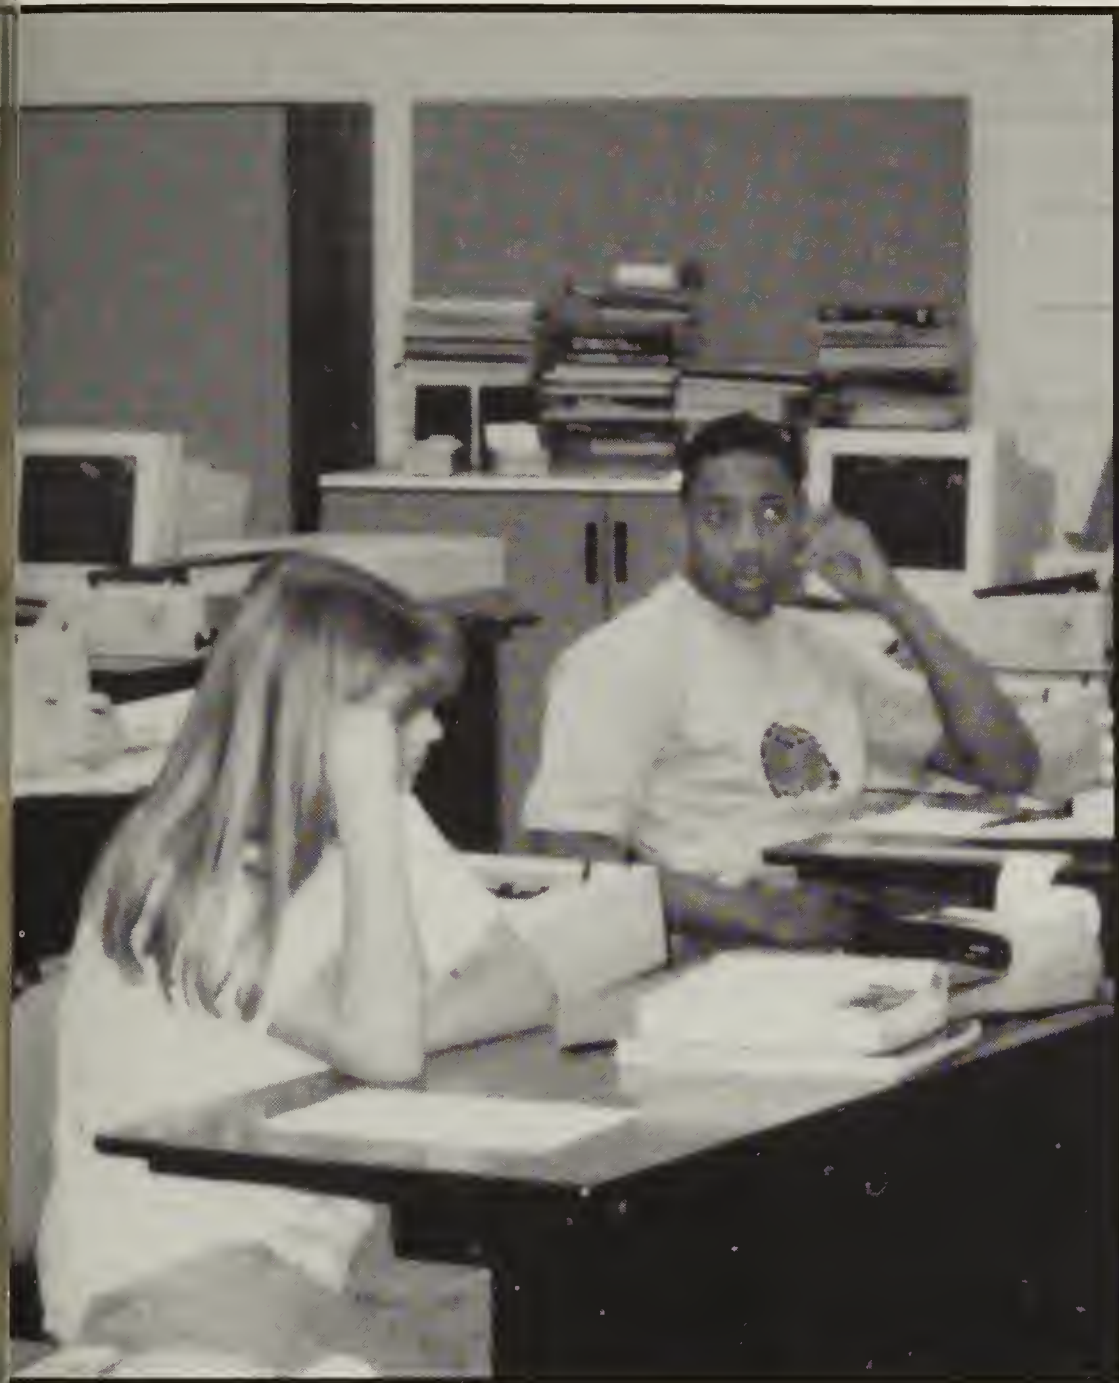

Business classes allowed students to take care of future plans, goals, and dreams. Move over corporate America, competition is headed your way!

Keepers of the Earth

Have you ever wondered who has the responsibility of raising the food on our tables, creating bouquets of flowers to brighten up our days, or for generally keeping the earth's grounds running smoothly? You need look no farther than our Agriculture Department. Students in natural resources, agriculture, and horticulture classes prepared themselves to literally be the keepers of the earth.

The individuals in the Agriculture Department participated in numerous hands-on activities and classroom experiences to learn about farming, forestry, wildlife, management, conservation, floral and landscape design, agriculture mechanics, business, and even outdoor recreations. These skills will be used by students in their future careers. Paul Boyd said, "Agriculture classes will help in my welding career. I'll get certified, get a job at Volvo, and I'll be rolling in the dough!" Ashley Pack said, "Horticulture class will give me a good background in my expected career, landscape design." Emily Jesse even said she was taking agriculture classes to help prepare herself to be a park ranger.

No matter how frustrating this career preparation was at times, it was a blast! Angelina Waddell said, "I like selling plants because it is fun to meet new people," and still speaking of horticulture, Ashley Pack said, "I love making people smile when I hand them their flowers." Natural resource students found going to Claytor Lake to carryout such assignments as identifying trees very interesting and relaxing.

Natural resources, agriculture, and horticulture classes gave students enjoyable and excellent experiences to prepare them to be the leaders of our natural world!

Serving the People

We all know who our teachers, doctors, beauticians, videographers, and cashiers are today, but who will fill these position tomorrow? The answer lies in our Child Care, Health Occupations, Cosmetology, Television Productions, and Marketing students. These students labored to learn how to "serve the people." Whether this meant providing health care or child care, students strived to learn the best way to serve in their particular fields.

In Marketing, students received much on-the-job experience to help them learn to be a service to others in various areas — restaurants, grocery stores, etc. Child Care students also received much valuable hands-on experience. They set out to understand, care for, and teach young children. Essentially, they were learning how to make a positive difference in our future. Cherity Akers said, "Child Care classes will help me prepare to have my own children as well as help me to advance in a child-related career." In T.V. Productions, students served the school by recording such memorable events as Homecoming and Prom. This experience will surely help them serve people in their future careers as videographers and broadcast journalists.

Linda Austin, a Health Occupations student, felt similarly that her classes would prepare her for the future: "Health Occupations classes help prepare you for a health career by teaching about the body, mind, and illnesses; and by giving you hands-on experiences." These classes worked hard to learn how to serve by keeping people healthy and caring for the sick. In addition, cosmetology students headed down the road toward serving by helping people look their best. Jocelyn Pittman said of this important service, "Cosmetology classes give me a good way of working my way through college."

With the job of providing tomorrow's services to America's people in the hands of our capable students, the future is looking a whole lot brighter!

Looking Towards the Future

Students in the Electronics, Mechanics and Building Trades classes were busy looking toward the future by preparing for careers in those vocations. A majority of the students enjoyed taking a class that was hands-on and gave them a break from the regular, sometimes dull and tedious classroom. Their work consisted of everything from building and testing the strength of bridges to rewiring circuits and painting cars. Chasity Albert remarked, "I learn more in my auto class. I like working on the cars, rather than book work."

Students realize the impact these classes will have in their careers. Carl Stoots said, "Because of my electricity class I won't go into this field blind, and that will help." They are being taught the "ins and outs" of the trade their class focuses on, and this may be a meaningful step in some peoples' lives. Many students leave their class with a greater appreciation of their field and a desire to continue in it after highschool.

These classes do not only teach the skills of the trade, however. Some people take other things with them that can also help in future endeavors. Virginia Tinsley replies, "Being the only girl in my building trades class has helped me learn how to get along with the men in the world."

Without these classes, students would miss out on the opportunity to plan for their future. Their necessity is greatly needed in vocation teaching as they are helping their students look toward the future.

What Did You Say?

Don't you hate it when someone speaks to you in a language you don't understand? Well, students of foreign languages found doing this quite humorous! They knew just enough foreign vocabulary to confuse their friends and families. They received this new learning from one of the four foreign language classes French, German, Spanish, or Latin, and were opened to a real world and culture outside their own.

Foreign language students enjoyed their classes and understood their importance as well. Ming Chan said, "It is important to know a foreign language since it is a vital key to understanding another nation's culture." Emily Gilbert said, "A foreign language introduces you to a different world." Students also understood that taking a foreign language is a requirement for entering most colleges. But even though students enrolled in a foreign language realized how necessary learning this language was, they still had a good time. Andrew Kirk simply said of Spanish, "I really enjoy the language!"

Students didn't just enjoy speaking their foreign language, they enjoyed a wide range of fun cultural activities as well. From making piñatas to having cultural parties, students participated in numerous mind-broadening experiences. Michelle Poore said, "I enjoy food day in French." By participating in these activities, students learned about the culture of various different countries. Sky Hopkins said she learned that "family is very important in Spanish-speaking countries."

Overall, students enrolled in Español, Français, Deutsch, and Latine classes prepared for their futures and opened their minds to other cultures. Best of all, they had fun doing it!

Don't Sweat It

Sweat, friends, games, fitness testing, gym suits, and more sweat...By now you've probably figured out that these words are part of physical education classes. These classes were full of individuals who truly valued physical fitness and realized the importance of health class. Students may have become tired of such strenuous activities as the mile run and such tedious activities as memorizing muscle groups, but they didn't sweat it!

Brooke Blackburn said, "P.E. gives you a chance to get in shape if you don't have spare time to exercise." She went on to say, "Health class is important especially because you learn how to prevent injuries and how to treat them." On another positive note, P.E./Health students enjoyed their classes. Michelle Duncan said, "My favorite activity in P.E. is soccer because I like learning skills I don't know and working as a team." Students also welcomed getting a break from long classes. Melissa Martin said, "You get to run all of your energy out before you go to class to just sit there." In addition, students valued the variety that came in the cycle of having P.E. for a few days and then having health class.

Overall, students had a blast in P.E. and Health classes. It was difficult at times, but they didn't sweat it!

Canvassing the World

Art makes life much more interesting — for the artist and for those who get to view the art. Just look at the walls of our school; they are sprinkled with art that livens up the atmosphere! Most of these works are student generated. A majority of us could not imagine being able to produce such pieces, but art students can and did! They strived to canvass the world.

Art students modeled a small number of their works after favorite artists, including Pablo Picasso, Leonardo Da Vinci, Michelangelo, and Vincent Van Gogh, but most of their works were absolutely original. The art that students labored to make their best could be seen in two art shows at our school. Some pieces of work even made it to other competitions.

However, no matter what type of art it was or what kind of award it won, students enjoyed creating it! Melinda Basye said, "I like art because it is something that I can do on my own; and when I'm through, I can look back and see what I've made." Emily Myers said, "Art is a way to express yourself through beautiful drawings and paintings." Chasity Wagner summed it up best when she said, "Art makes everything seem to disappear."

Art students created personal masterpieces that not only benefited themselves by giving them an outlet of self-expression, but also benefited others by brightening up their days or maybe even giving them something to think about. Through their wide variety of creations, art students canvassed the world!

Drama at Its Best

Students who participated in any of the school's drama courses were supplying themselves with countless opportunities—opportunities to learn about theatre, to learn technical skills, to act in plays, to improve communication skills, and to gain confidence. Mr. Jeff McCoy, the drama teacher, said, "Acting is a lot of fun and performing helps in boosting self-confidence."

The drama classes offered at our school were first-rate. Roxanne Hall said, "All the classes offered her are unique. Not only do I get to act and take part in activities, but I get to incorporate one of my favorite things, art, into stage craft as well." Among the courses were: Theatre Arts Exploration, which taught students the basics of acting, make-up, and auditioning techniques; Advanced Theatre Arts, which allowed students to improve their acting skills; and Stage craft and Set Design, which gave students basic knowledge of drawing for the stage, building sets, and working the lights and sound for productions. Another class, Theatre Arts Appreciation, which taught students theatre history, was a brand-new addition to these courses. Roxanne also said, "I love being able to take part, to just jump in to class activities feet first. That is what theatre is about." By taking these courses, students increased their chances of getting a part in one of the school's productions. Mr. McCoy said, "Classes help students to become better performers and have stronger auditions."

Drama could certainly be seen at its best in our school. Students who took part in the drama program used their knowledge to help make the school's productions outstanding!

The Sounds of Music

"Are you dying in there?" Have you ever heard this question while happily singing in the shower? If you have, chances are you're not a member of choir. The sound of the choir students' music was certainly sweet! They sang moving melodies, exemplifying the sound of music!

Singing, which comes naturally to most choir students, was something that they did to make themselves happy. Christina Conner said, "I love to express my feelings through music." Sara Sullivan said, "Singing makes me feel better everyday." However, students didn't just sing for their own happiness; they sang to bring joy to others as well. Stephanie Whitt said, "The best part of choir is performing and seeing the faces of the people who come — just watching them smile is wonderful." Choir students also received enjoyment from being together. Kristal Jones said, "I love the fellowship with friends of all grades. We're like a huge family."

Members of choir showed their love for music and their devotion to their choir in their sterling performances. The students performed various concerts including ones for elementary and middle schools. Teresa Boyd said, "It is so much fun because we perform a variety of music so that everyone is guaranteed to enjoy something that we sing."

The sound of music, which could be heard floating out of the choir room, was beautiful. Students came together to produce melodies that could warm anyone's heart — and this made them very happy!

The Sound of Music

The Golden Cougar Marching Band harmoniously blended music, talent, and friendship to create a truly rounded band of gold this year. Its members exhibited their complete school spirit at football games, parades, and endless fund-raisers throughout the year to work their way to pumping up the crowds, excellent ratings, and finally a spring reward trip to Disney World.

The hard work and practices of the band were sometimes gruelling. Sarah Conner said, "I have worked in band as much as I would in Chemistry class." She didn't, however, seem to mind the effort; she said, "It is fun when we are all together as a group." In other words, the hard work of the band was made tolerable by the closeness of its members. Heather Talbert said, "The best part of being in the band is that we are like a big family."

This togetherness made it easy for the band to be successful. In numerous competitions, the band fared well, bringing home awards for the school, and band members, to be proud of. The band's drum majors had a spectacular year too bringing home a first place win at Salem. Michelle Bolen said, "It's great when you hear the crowd cheer for you!"

When the Marching Band season was over, students participated in the Concert, Symphonic, or Jazz bands. This participation kept members "in shape" for future marching seasons. Band students set many of our school's events to music. Their sense of togetherness helped them receive much recognition and helped them to become a unified band of gold!

Flags in Motion

A band without a color guard would be like Tom without Jerry, Batman without Robin, Linus without his blanket...In the words of April Adams, "Guard is important to a band because it helps express the music with color and dance; it makes the show come alive!"

Even though most spectators focus on the band, the color guard is just as vital to the performance of a successful show. Heather Hawley said that color guard "makes the band stick out visually." The guard spent countless hours practicing both with the band and alone. This practicing paid off; the color guard received an excellent rating at the state band festival. However, the color guard members try to avoid just hard work. They shared numerous funny and memorable moments. One of the best, some remember, was getting locked in the Drama room for half an hour on the night of the fire parade. The band almost left without them!

The guard worked through frustrations and conflicts to help in presenting a great show. By the end of the season, the giant flag was pulled over the band with the greatest ease, costume changes were a sinch, and not a flag fell to the field. Their dedication put the flags in motion.

If These Walls Could Talk

If these walls could talk they would release the memories of 25 years of students, activities, teachers and previous students' memories. The members of the Literary Magazine, Yearbook, and Journalism staffs strived to nurture individual creativity in order to produce publications that they and the school would be proud of for yet another year. Browsing through the Inklings Literary Arts Magazine, Cougar Pinnacle, or P.C. Tribune, this is certainly evident!

The Inklings staff hoped to equal, if not better, the success of the previous year's magazine, which earned an excellent rating from the Virginia High School League. Veterans of the Inklings staff, as well as newcomers, worked towards this with fresh, new pieces of literature and art. Chris Davidson, a freshman member of the staff, said, "I have been looking forward to joining Inklings since I heard about it several years ago."

During yearbook, in order to keep with the 25th anniversary theme, students rummaged through the PCHS archives searching for old photographs featuring, among other things, the construction of the school, teachers, and activities. The staff also had to gather facts about 25 years ago by conduction face to face interviews and passing out questionnaires. Some of these memories can be seen in the pages of this publication in the anniversary spreads. Ginger Glenn, Editor-in-Chief, said, "I've been looking forward to the yearbook's 25th anniversary for two years. With the spring delivery and and some enthusiastic staff members, we're excited about the final product."

The P.C. Tribune, the student managed school paper, also required much hard work and effort. The paper was published by the second semester journalism class who was able to produce a newspaper each month. Laura Vipperman, Editor-in-Chief, said, "The P.C. Tribune gives students an opportunity to get information on current world and school events through a medium that is produced by the Journalism staff."

The Inklings, Yearbook, and Journalism staffs churned out products that would leave a brief history of our current year behind. These works will be an example for generations to come and a source of the memories that we have left behind in these walls.

Going to Face the World?

For some students, high school is the end of the academic road, but for others, college awaits. Whether they were planning to go to a big school or a smaller local community college, students spent hours filling out applications, taking entrance exams, and applying for scholarships. The guidance office, as always, was more than a help to some students who were working to reach their highest goals. The road from high school leads students to the rest of their lives, so seniors, whatever your plans are for next year, good luck!

Did You Do That?

Is there a moment in your life you can look back on and just not believe you could have done something so stupid? Don't worry, you are not alone. Everyone has had one of those times that should really just be erased from history. Hopefully, however, you will be able to look back on it later in life, laugh, and ask yourself, "Did I really do that?"

What is your most embarrassing moment?

"In second grade I walked out of the bathroom with my skirt tucked in my underwear!"

-Angela Hunt

"My most embarrassing moment was getting caught on tape dancing at Homecoming."

-Marc Fitzwater

"My most embarrassing moment was when my friends found out I was related to Troy."

-Jug Barkley

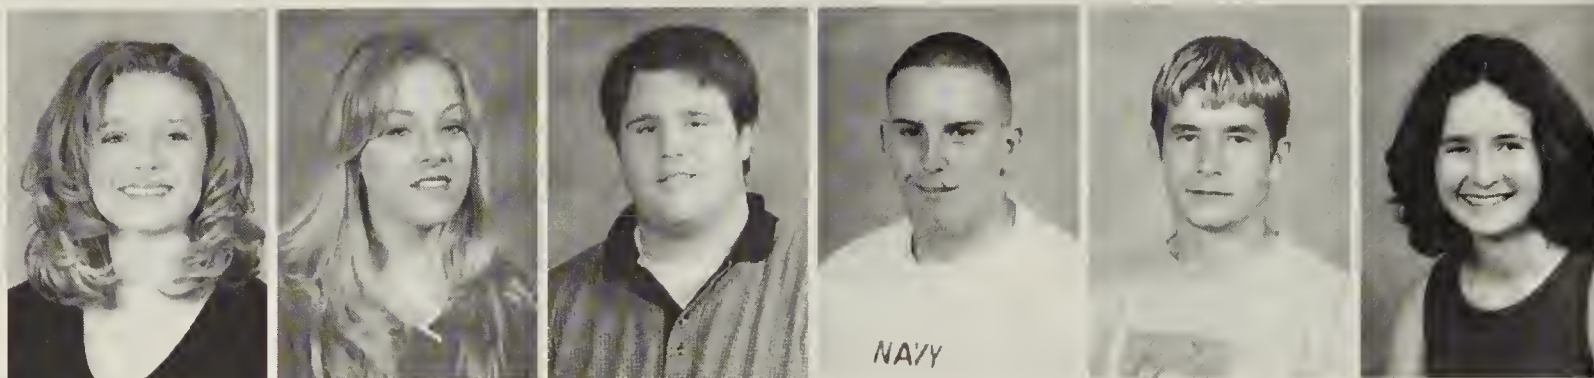

Erin Howell is being funny as always. She said, "My most embarrassing moment was in fifth grade. In the middle of the day, I wet my pants. I was too embarrassed to even call my mom, so I just stayed at school in wet pants."

Something to Snack On

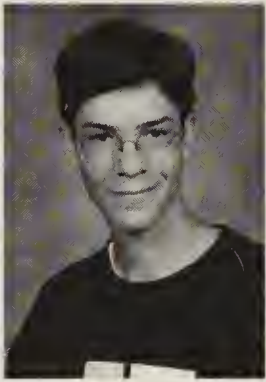

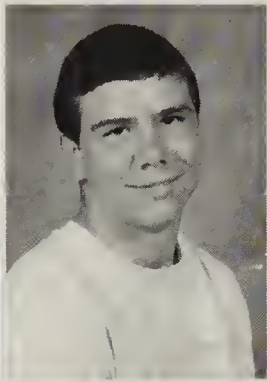

You know that aching feeling you get in your stomach around 2nd block? That feeling is probably hunger and will only subside when you finally make it to your lunch block, wait in line for what seems like an eternity, and at last get your hands on FOOD! All students have favorite school lunches and on the days when these meals are served, the long wait is well worth it! For a majority of students, pizza is this special lunch.

The Drive

One of the defining moments of growing up is getting your driver's license. It shows independence, responsibility and a new freedom. It takes a lot to own a car, especially money, but this seldom stops students even if they have to get a job to keep up with the costs. Regardless, the parking lots are full on a daily basis with cars whose owners have a drive to drive.

Holiday Fun

Besides getting a break from school, holidays provide students with a chance to visit family, travel, and shop. They give students a much needed "breather" from the hard work and stress of school. A student poll said that Christmas is the favorite holiday, both for its fun and vacation length. This year it was extended for a week because of ice and snow.

Pets, Our Friends for Life

When you come home from school, do you have a dog that greets you at your door, or a cat that must be promptly feed? Do you have any unusual animals like snakes or turtles that you have come to know as best friends? Are you planning to one day own a large, high maintenance animal like a horse, or a small, easy to own animal like a fish? If you can answer yes to any of these questions, you make up part of the large majority of students who have come to know, and love, their favorite pet.

What kind of pet do you have?

SPORTS

On the Fast Track...

At barber shops, grocery stores, and other spots all over Pulaski you could always hear people talk about the approaching Friday night football game. Chances are that most of these people were talking about all of the new starters for this year's team, including nine sophomores and one freshman. The coaching staff knew going into the season that they would have a very inexperienced team.... "We really need to prepare them for the type of schedule that we will face."

Another important part of this season was the fact that it was Coach Joel Hicks' twentieth season on the sideline for the team. When asked why he thinks that Coach Hicks has been so successful, Michael Epperly said, "He spends a lot of time working outside of school and practice."

This year's team has also experienced more injuries than normal. During summer practices junior Dusty Henley went down with a sprained ankle. Randy Grubb then injured his hip during the first game of the season against Anacostia and was out for the whole season. Also, Kwasi Scott suffered an ankle injury and missed the annual battle against Salem.

Although young, the varsity football team has learned many new things that will be important for the success of next year's team. Coach Hicks and the underclassmen players will have something to look forward to after such a great season this year.

Willie Hale avoids a block by coming through to make a tackle against William Fleming.

While being escorted by House, Jarrett Porter sprints down field to pick up the first down.

Kwasi Scott carries defenders down field to pick another Cougar first down.

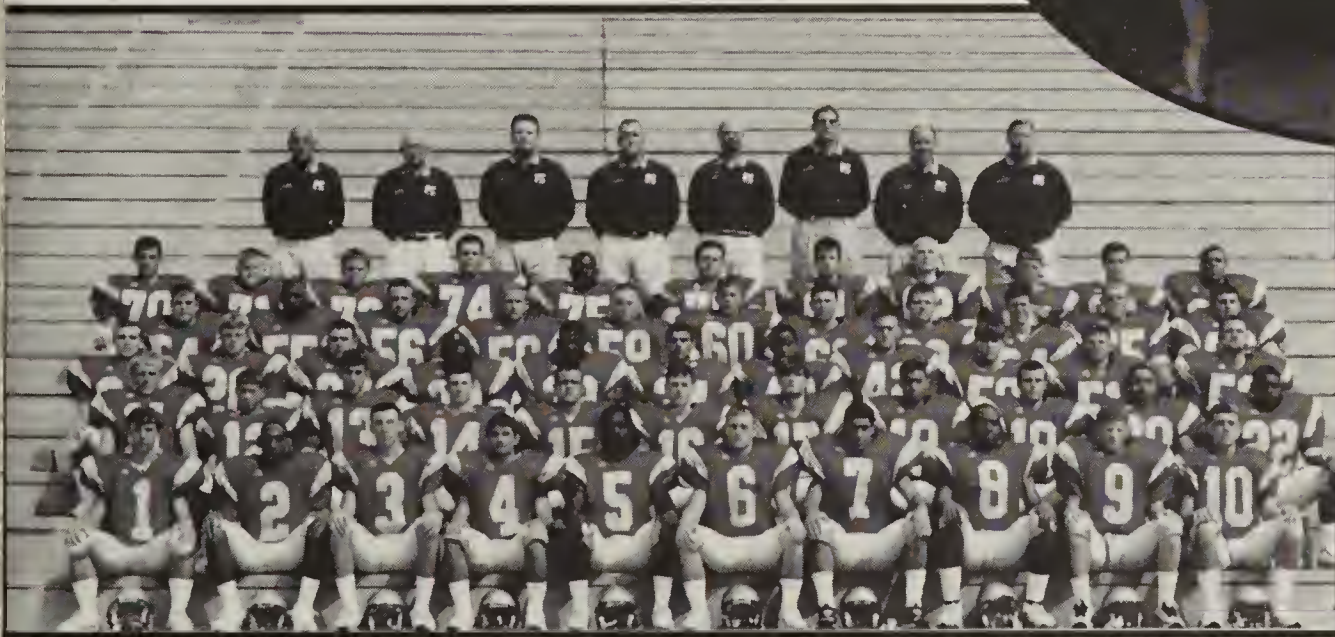

Quarter-back Travis Rupe drops back in the pocket and throws to an open receiver down field.

Cougar Pride! The team gets a break down at mid-field after a big win.

Block that kick! Dewayne Burks gives it his all to block the punt.

Determination + Hard Work = Cheer!!

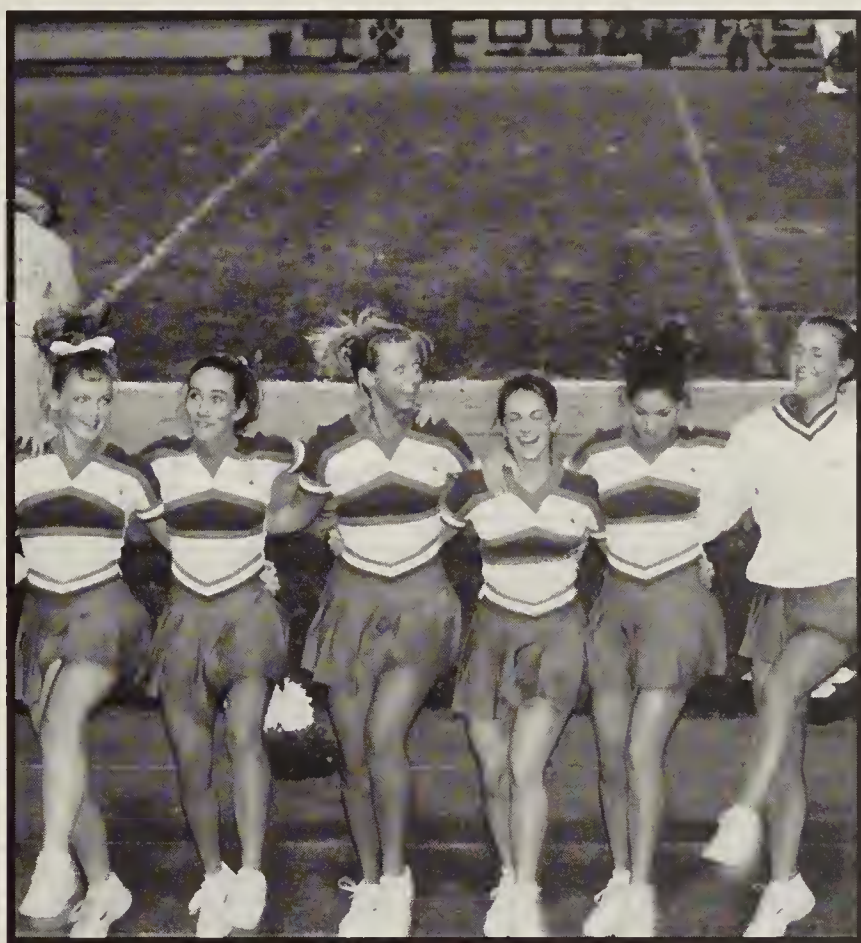

Imagine a football game without cheerleaders. Would there be as much excitement or as much crowd participation? The varsity cheerleaders would have certainly chimed back an enthusiastic "NO!" to this question. Even with mostly new members, the cheerleaders' perseverance and determination would not allow any such factor to be a setback. With only four returning varsity cheerleaders, the squad trained extra hard in order to give the football team and the fans their all. They didn't, however, just cheer for others; they also cheered to benefit themselves.

The effects of cheerleading on the members was evident when Emily Hale stated, "Cheerleading gives me lots of exercise and teaches me to be more confident!" By possessing so much persistence and self-confidence, the entire varsity cheerleading squad set and example for the ninth grade and J.V. squads as well as the whole school. Jennifer White said, "Being a varsity football cheerleader is a lot of responsibility because you represent your school and have to be a good role-model." The varsity cheerleaders certainly didn't mind this responsibility — they took it on with smiling faces and a great deal of spirit!

All in all, the varsity cheerleaders turned setbacks into victories as the season was a successful one! In the process, they spread much cheer and served as shining examples of school pride.

Spirit, who's got it? No doubt about that, definitely the varsity cheerleaders!

The squad displays their camp success with the many ribbons the received.

Laugh a little and win a lot! What could be more fun than an exciting Friday night, thrilled fans, and a great group of cheerleaders to rile the crowd?

Headed to the Fast Lane

What fuels the J. V. and Freshman football team is the knowledge that soon they will be the ones that everyone comes to see on Friday night, the ones that children line up to smack on the shoulders as they walk down the stadium stairs, the ones that old men sitting on their front porches talk about.

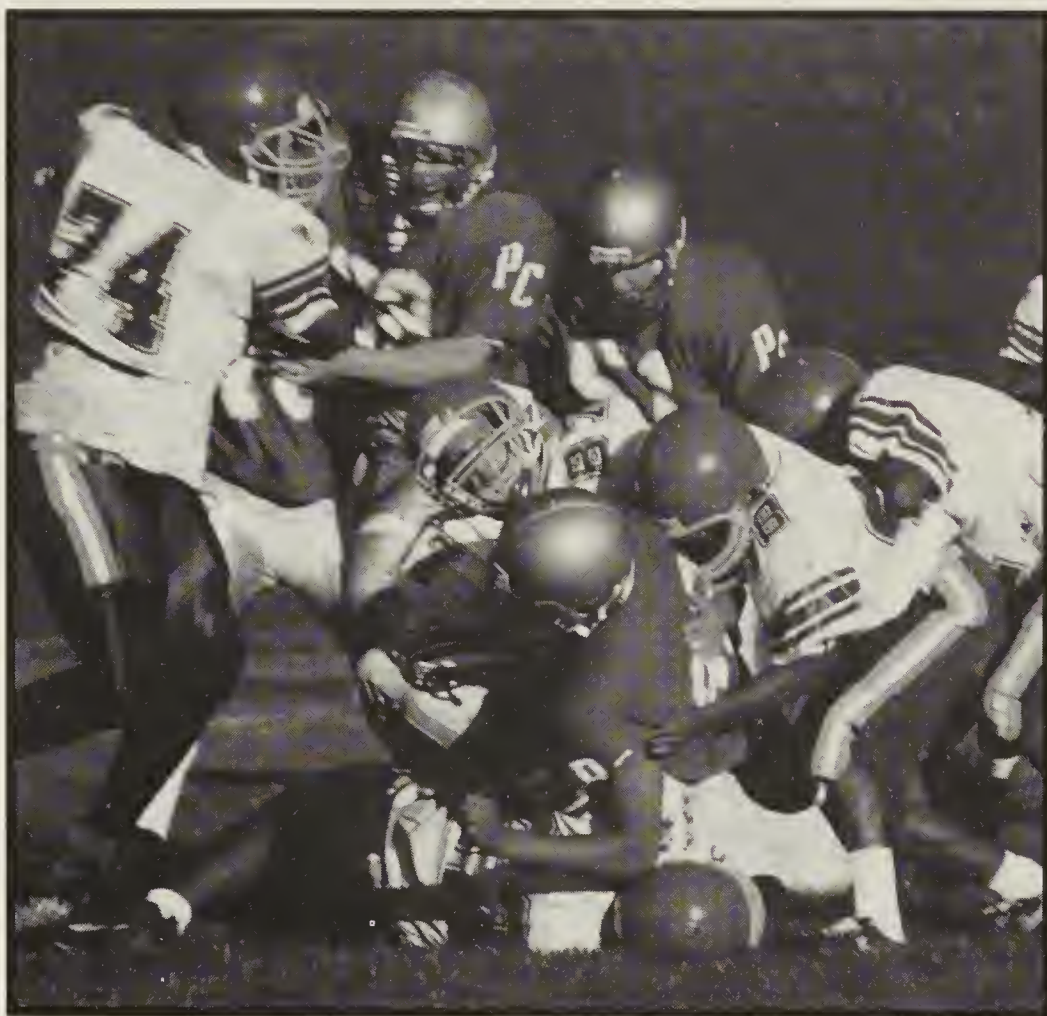

The J. V. team's season started off with convincing victories against Greenbrier East and Princeton, and a 27-20 victory against Woodrow Wilson. The J. V. players practiced, worked out, dressed out, and traveled with the varsity team. The coaching staff felt that this gave the players an extra workout, and the J. V. team felt that two-a-day practices, although long, hard, and strenuous, improved their conditioning immensely.

The Freshman team also opened up their season with big victories against Cave Spring and Princeton. Although they have only played together as a team about two months, some have played on the same middle school team, and others have been playing against each other since elementary school. When asked about how important it was to develop a strong J. V. and Freshman football program, freshman Wes Ratcliffe said, "I think that it is very important because, with the guidance of the varsity coaches, the freshman team members will be used to the hard work; it won't be so tough on us when we move up to varsity."

The Freshman and J. V. football team members play during harsh weather and with crowds in pale comparison to the crowds that the varsity team draws every home game. Yet through all this, team members endure, knowing that soon they will be the ones drawing the huge crowds every Friday night, and the ones with thousands of local supporters. They are on their way, and doing a great job as they go!

Loose Ball! The freshmen defense causes a fumble and the two teams scramble to recover it.

William Fleming defenders can only watch while Greg Cobbs leaves them in the dust to score a touchdown.

Josh Quesenberry catches a pass, then runs as fast as he can trying to pick up the first down.

Derrick Sartin breaks through the line, ready to make the Quarter-back pay for throwing that pass.

While being wrapped up by defenders, Greg Cobbs stretches out and picks up the first down.

Ashley Lindsey shows her spirit, helping the cheerleaders to get the crowd's attention.

Spirit, they've got it! The J.V. squad shows it at the field.

C-O-U-G-A-R-S!

C-O-U-G-A-R-S! Let's go! This is one of the spirit-evoking cheers that was enthusiastically chanted by both the J.V. and freshmen cheerleading squads. These squads shared two common goals, to have fun and to be the epitome of school pride. Ashley Lindsey said, "Even though cheerleading is a lot of hard work, it is also fun!"

This desire to be one of the select few was realized from a very early age. We've all heard the voices of little girls on Friday night echoing through the stands, imitating the chants of their idols. Amber Manis reflected this when she said, "Cheerleading has always been in my heart; it just comes naturally." Little did those children realize that someday their dreams would come true and they would show their awesome Cougar pride.

Four of the J.V. cheerleaders, Stephanie Webb, Stephanie Sutphin, Emily Hurst, and Adrienne Kelly, are broadening their cheerleading horizons by cheering at the Citrus Bowl in Orlando, Florida. The ninth grade squad grew very close. Mary Hale said, "Our squad has become really close; we are like sisters." Both of the squads heightened the already lofty expectations of J.V. and ninth grade cheerleaders by putting in extra practice, time and effort.

Go PCHS! These waving colors could not be brighter.

Game. Set. Match.

The Girls' Tennis team was comprised of many old, yet many new players. As the returning Juniors and Seniors kept up spirits and practiced well formed techniques, the Freshman were able to learn first hand and receive the confidence boost they needed to improve. The team had a new coach this year, Kathy Waller, who played tennis in her high school years here. The girls were grateful to have a coach who understood what it felt like to be out on the court. Senior Belinda Lambert said, "After missing last year's season, I decided I really missed the sport. I am glad I came back to play my senior year and with such a nice and talented group of people."

All of the girls feel tennis is important, for health and fun. Amy Van Deusen summed it up the best when she said, "Tennis gives girls an actual individual sport to compete in." Some of the their favorite players are Andre Agassi and Anna Kournikova, great and encouraging roll models!

The team will graduate three outstanding senior players this year, Amanda Hallstead, Belinda Lambert, and Laura Gillmore, but the underclassmen are ready for the challenge. With a new coach and high aspirations, the girls are sure to continue learning, having fun, and playing to their best ability.

In the Swing of Things

Unlike other sports such as baseball, basketball, and football, golf is a sport that can take years to learn and a lifetime to master. The golf team members are trying their best to learn more about and master their chosen sport.

The golf team starts their season during the latter part of the summer, and plays through the first two months of school. Although the golf matches do not draw many fans, the team members are very focused on doing their best and helping their team win its match. Kellen Wohlford said, "It feels good when you know that you have been a part of helping the team win."

This increasingly popular sport has drawn the attention of 16 members this year. Long matches, late evenings, and thoughtfulness in planning the next shot are large parts of the season for the team. With practices held at Thorn Spring Golf Club, they work to improve all aspects of their game.

Although the season ends in late September, three members of the team, senior Steven Thompson, junior Webb Donald, and freshman Adrian Rygas went on to the Northwest Region tournament. From there, Webb Donald went to the state finals.

Golf is a sport that not only takes physical ability, but takes mental prowess as well. All of the team members have both of these qualities, and that is what makes a successful team.

Web Donald rounds it up with another chip in.

Matt Mansell concentrates on a drive at a practice on the Thornspring Golf Course.

Net Work

The J.V. volleyball team spent countless hours perfecting their athletic abilities and improving their communication skills. Whitney White commented on the importance of communication in the game when she said, "Volleyball is such a team sport; everyone has a job and takes part in each play." The girls took their individual efforts and brought them together in a network of strength, ready from the beginning to face the challenges of the season.

The players feel the sport is a way for them to release stress in a constructive way. Sarah Blevins laughed, "With volleyball you can relieve stress by hitting the ball, not someone else." Volleyball also teaches players to be on their toes at all times. Whitney Akers remarked, "You have to be ready all the time. You never know where the ball is going or who's going to be there to receive it."

Most importantly, all of the girls greatly value the friendships that have developed and strengthened throughout the season. Emily Meyers said, "The best part of volleyball would definitely have to be the friendships," and this team togetherness and spirit carried them through a great season.

“Setting” the Mood

The varsity volleyball team devoted many hard and strenuous hours of running, setting, and sweating to their season. The rewards that they received were more than they could have ever imagined. While they lost some time, and maybe a few pounds, they gained a bond of friendship that will linger throughout their lives.

Their noble contributions did not go unnoticed. More fans attended their games this season than ever before. The team conducted many fund-raisers and gained the utmost respect that they had worked so vigorously to achieve. Sophomore player, Courtney Baldwin, expressed that “the chemistry this year was great.” Senior, Mouse Blevins, enjoys playing because it challenges her as an athlete and she quotes, “I love this game!”

Volleyball is a sport where team members must learn to always be there to back one another. Many players do not see themselves in a college volleyball program in the future, but can definitely see a bright future in the friendships, team work, and knowledge of the backing that they should give to others on and off the court which they encountered this year.

Breanna Burrus raises the game to a “higher” level.

Holly O'Dell and Mouse Blevins congratulate each other after an awesome team effort.

Splish, Splash!

The swim team significantly grew in numbers by the addition of several new members this year. It was a rebuilding year for the young team which was composed of a great deal of freshmen who experienced the difficult butterfly and racing relays for the first time.

The team continued to practice at the YMCA. Although early morning practices and transportation were sometimes a problem, the swimmers all agreed that the little inconveniences did not overshadow the benefits of being on the team. Kalah Crouch summed it up by saying, "It was sometimes hard for my parents to get me to practices, but in the long run it was worth it."

Swimming proved to be more than just an athletic activity for most swim team members. As B.J. Southern said,

"Swimming relaxes me and with every stroke more troubles disappear." Jessie Spraker, team captain said, "Swimming is an activity that I will be able to participate in for the rest of my life. It is great in that you do not have to have other team members or competitors to enjoy it. I will take away a lot from this experience; friends, memories, and the love of swimming!"

Emily Gilbert, Meredith Glenn, and Sarah Martin all agree that swimming is the best as they rest after their last event.

Tara Lundy takes a last breath before nearing the end of her lap in a relay.

Abby Williams hits the wall and Kelly Smith takes off with a powerful leap from the board.

Grab that arm! G.C. Duck struggles to get this Patrick Henry opponent's arm out from under him in hopes of a win.

Wrestling to Win

Wrestling, in the words of team member Brent Farley, is "a tough sport." The members of the wrestling team enjoyed the roughness of the sport, however; and they also enjoyed winning — winning not just matches, but self-discipline, physical fitness, and team cooperation.

Team members stressed the importance of team in the individual sport of wrestling. David Hale said, "You need somebody to push you to your limit." Aaron Hawkins said, "If you lose, you cost the team points; if you win, you help the team." But members of the wrestling team did not seem to mind this added pressure. Matthew Nester said, "I enjoy the hard work that comes from being a member of the wrestling team."

The guys spent hours building their strength, making great use of the auxillary gym and weight room. Regardless of their weight class, they had to be strong, and strong they were. Each member took their opponents for all they were worth!

In short, this group of athletes pushed themselves to their highest fitness levels and worked together as a team. No matter how many matches were actually won or lost, team members won many valuable experiences!

Matt Nester fends off his opponent with a sturdy arm planted firmly on the mat.

Natural Born Players

Josh Akers concentrates on the basket, hoping to gain some important last quarter foul shots.

Basketball prevailed yet another season as fan's, parents, and friends headed to the gym to see these natural born players show what they were made of on the court. The boy's varsity basketball team got off to a quick start this year when they won their first six games. The victories came over Amherst, whom they beat three times, Roanoke Catholic whom they beat twice, and E.C. Glass whom they beat once. They showed they were ready for fast play and major action on the court, and took on opponents with confidence.

They won two more games, both against Graham, pushing their record to 8-2 before entering R.V.D. play. Some of the main reasons for the team's success were as senior Roger Adams said, "We are very aggressive on defense and we play together well."

Ask just about any J.V. or ninth grade boy's basketball player when he got started playing basketball, and chances are the answer will be, "As a young child." It seems that the members of both teams were born to play basketball. This natural ability to play the sport, and play it well, was evidenced by the teams' achievements on the court!

The boys listed various events as catalysts, which caused their natural born abilities to turn into an interest in playing basketball. Shane Jackson said, "The NBA is what got me started." Daniel Goff said, "I just picked up a ball." But whatever the reasons for getting the boys started playing basketball were, once they got started, they could not stop! The successes of the teams' season were not only due to natural ability, they were due to practice as well. Both teams spent countless hours practicing their sport. The J.V. team's coach must have lived by the philosophy: "The early bird catches the worm." His team had 6:30 a.m. practices! As much as the J.V. players enjoyed playing basketball, they hated these early exercises. The freshman team was happy to be able to do all of their practicing in the afternoon.

With the natural talent that was found in all three of these teams, how could they help but to get off to a quick start?

Frank Cobbs takes it up for a lay-up and another two points for the Varsity team.

Silence fell on the crowd as Kellen Wohlford went to the line. These easy foul shots greatly helped the J.V.'s score!

Shooting for the Stars

The girls' basketball teams used their experience this year to make a formula for triumph. The unity with the two teams combined with determination, skill, and dedication, and in the end it was evident that the girls were shooting for the stars.

Playing basketball, and playing it well, seemed to be an easy task for the Varsity team. This is in great part due to the fact that they were used to playing together. Mandy Moore said, "This year is great because several of us have played together since middle school." The team, made up of six seniors, four juniors, two sophomores, and one freshman, showed their superb teamwork by their success on the court. At the beginning of the season, Tiffany Conner, confidant about the team, said, "Our team has a lot of chemistry and we're off to a successful start!" This success was not only due to the chemistry of the team, it was due to practice, dedication, drive, and more practice!

The members of the J.V. team truly enjoyed their season. The reason, they just did so well! Jennifer Chandler said, "I like this year because we are winning! I hate to lose." Whitney Taylor said, "We're a strong team this year." The girls also had a blast because of each other! Shanean Hodge said, "It's a fun experience playing with all of the players I have never played with." Even though many of the girl's had never played together this did not take away from the team's group effort. Whitney Taylor said, "We have good chemistry — we really get along well."

Throughout the season, the member of the J.V. team were also thinking about their futures. Many players saw playing basketball as a way to ensure a quality education after high school. Whitney Taylor said, "Playing on the team will give me a chance to go to a good college."

The girls definitely showed that they were "ahead of the game." They mixed the ingredients for success and came out with winning combinations. Together, the team members were able to shoot for the stars!

Great defense! Yashika Brooks and Heather Burnette congratulate each other after a great play.

Swoosh

Swoosh is a sound that could be heard at PCHS's basketball games — caused not only by balls falling through hoops, but by the pom-poms of basketball cheerleaders as well. They used their school spirit to motivate the teams and get the crowd involved!

The basketball cheerleaders enjoyed supporting the school! Micah Hamblin said, "I have fun dancing and showing school spirit." The girls did not even mind going to away games. Courtney Miller said, "Away games are my favorite because our basketball teams do not have as much support by friends, family, or spectators at these games, and we motivate players by being there." Basically, the basketball cheerleaders' spirit was contagious!

The girls also saw cheerleading as a sport. They certainly practiced as much and worked as hard as any sports team. Lea Compton said, "We have practices, go to camp, and get injured just like a football or basketball player." The basketball cheerleaders were obviously devoted to their sport!

The swoosh of cheerleaders' pom-poms could be heard at almost every basketball game. With pom-poms or not, the girls' enthusiastic spirit helped cheer the teams to victory!

Springing into Spring

Ah, spring — A time when birds sing their beautiful melodies, flowers begin to bloom into exquisite works of wonder, trees start showing their brilliant greenery...Nature is basically awakened. Nature, however, is not the only thing that comes to life in the spring. Take a look back at the student body of the 1999 spring semester and you will see that the season definitely awoke the Cougars and sprung them into action! Students participated in an extensive variety of activities: spring sports, club competitions, the Miss. PCHS pageant, art and band trips, prom, yearbooks, and of course, graduation and all of the events surrounding the momentous occasion. As if these activities were not enough for students, there were numerous picnics and banquets, dance recitals, last minute research papers, and even some exam preparation to occupy their time. Chances are, everybody had something to do.

Spring not only brought with it tons of activities to keep students busy, it heralded a renewed sense of vigor to the Cougars as well. Students stuck together, keeping the spirit of the school and the spirit of spring alive!

On one of their last days together, the Senior class met for their picnic, enjoying steak dinner in the Commons and volleyball and football games outside.

Making it look easy, Frank Cobbs soars over the high jump bar.

On the Right Track

Do you think you know exactly what it means to put forth all of your effort? Members of the indoor and outdoor track teams absolutely knew how to give themselves up to hard work! They were driven to succeed and they did! First year head coach, Jeff Levy said, "I am really pleased with the outstanding efforts of these athletes."

The indoor track team was a young one, made up mostly of freshmen and sophomores, but that did not stop them from winning. Andy Pratt, a senior member of the team, said, "I feel like our season was the best ever."

With the girls finishing fifth in the district competition and the guys finishing only a few points out of second place, the season was one of the best ever! The highlight of this triumphant season came when the team won a second place trophy at the VMI Invitational in Lexington.

The outdoor track season was also a success. Like the indoor track team, the outdoor team was also extremely young, but again this did not hinder their record. Sprinting past the district competition, 26 girls and boys earned the right to compete in regionals. For four athletes, the track season did not even end there — State competition was on the horizons of Loni Miller, Shanean Hodge, Heather Cook, and Steve Ritter. As for the rest of the members, Kelly Ferrell said, "I think the entire team improved a great deal!"

Both track teams were strong competitors in their sport, remaining on the right track throughout their victorious seasons. Mary Hale said, "Track is a WHOLE lot of work, but it is well worth it in the end!"

Causing a Racquet

Boy's Tennis Team

The boy's tennis team may have lacked team experience, but they made up for this with determination and a good sense of humor. With only two returning members and three new seniors, the fresh new team learned together. Chris Hawks, one of those new senior members said, "I joined the tennis team because I have the urge to hit stuff." Everyday practices and an enthusiastic spirit transformed this urge to "hit stuff" into real tennis skill. Enthused members laughed through their mistakes, while their success encouraged them to hit even harder. They were able to show their opponents what they were made of and they had a good time doing it. The boy's tennis team definitely caused a racquet!

Chris Hawks takes his energy out on a sunny afternoon with some fore-hand exercises.

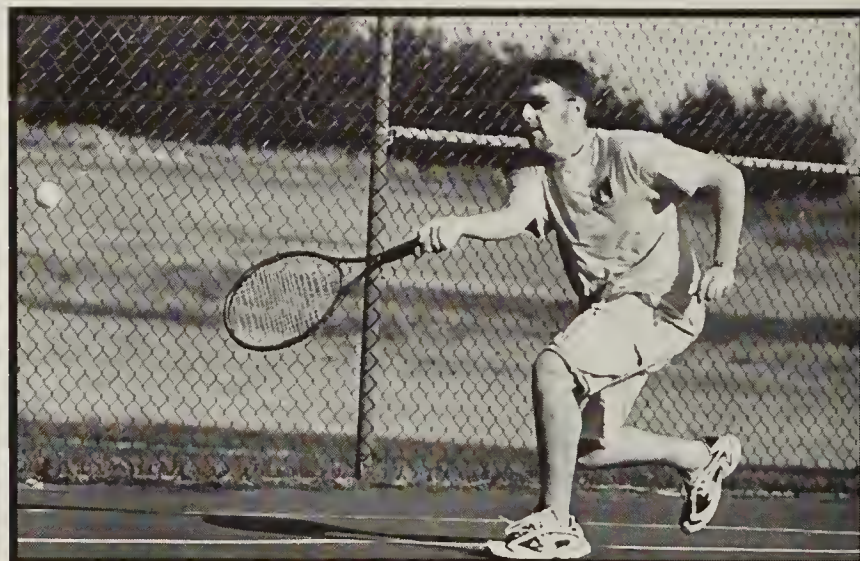

Steven Thompson stretches to save a high ball in practice.

Matt Wigginton gives it his all, and in the process improves his game!

Brooks Hayes shows how he can cause a racket as he leans in to save this ball.

Great Expectations

The girl's soccer season began with great expectations. Being fairly new to the school's array of sports, the team hoped to better previous years' records and continue to secure a place for themselves in the athletic department.

The girls were glad to have the chance to show their skills on the soccer field. Jessica McKinney said, "The boys can't have all the fun." Whitney White agreed, saying, "We have just as much right to play as the guys!" Whitney was certainly right — the girls practiced and played hard, always working together cooperatively.

All of this determination meant that the girl's high expectations were met. Amber Kirkland said, "Our season is going well. We have a really good team." Sarah Akers added, "We have grown from past years and, as a result, we are winning games!" These wins added up to a better season than the team had ever had.

The members of the team enjoyed a season full of new triumphs and new friendships. Realizing the importance of this sport to our school, Kathy McCain said, "We add diversity to the sports program and provide enthused school spirit." Expectations are already running high for next year's team!

Sara Martin uses her practice skills to fight for possession.

With great expectations, Jessica McKinney hustles to the goal while Holly O'Dell scans the field around her to fend off any opponents.

Greg Canevari studies ahead and closes in on the ball to protect his possession as he approaches the goal.

Andy Pratt gives up on his feet and relies on his head to make this play.

Will Hager shows that effort and exertion are necessities in reaching the goal as he saves the ball for the team.

Smoothing Out the Wrinkles

The J.V. and Varsity boy's soccer teams both experienced rebuilding seasons. The team members possessed plenty of skill on the field; they just had a few wrinkles to smooth out. Cory Surber, a Varsity player said, "We have the talent, we just haven't quite been able to achieve the goal."

The soccer players put much effort forth. J.V. player David Booker said, "Every day we practice for two hours and it is long, gruelling, and hard!" Still, the athletes enjoyed their sport. Adam Fariss, and eighth grade asset to the J.V. team, commented, "I love everything about playing soccer for the high school!" Cory Surber spoke for the Varsity team; "We have a lot of fun together."

The J.V. and Varsity soccer teams may not have had the best seasons ever, but the guys worked together to smooth out the wrinkles so that they could reach their goals. David Booker said, "We have a couple things to work on, but our future looks good!"

"When the going gets tough..."

Varsity Baseball Team

"When the going gets tough, the tough get going." Both the J.V. and Varsity baseball teams may have gotten off to a slow start; but once they got into the game, they were unstoppable. With a combination of hard work and a positive attitude, the members of both teams pulled themselves together to achieve triumphant seasons. Justin Akers said, "We got off to a rocky start with confusion and chaos, then things started to turn around."

Success was achieved through grueling practices, even on Saturdays. The boys devoted themselves to the team, giving baseball their all. Matt Burton said, "We have pulled together and started winning." The boys, however, had been used to the hard work which baseball requires for years. Josh Akers said, "I am used to it. I have been playing baseball for ten years." Not only were the guys used to the work, they did not even mind it. Scooter Melton said, "I have enjoyed being on the J.V. team because I love the game."

Since the members of the baseball teams enjoyed playing their sport, they were positively enthusiastic as well. With a smile, Kevin Taylor said of his J.V. team, "I think we are the best in the state!" Rusty Lane commented, "Baseball is the best sport ever created." This same fervor helped the Varsity team achieve a winning record for the first time since 1995.

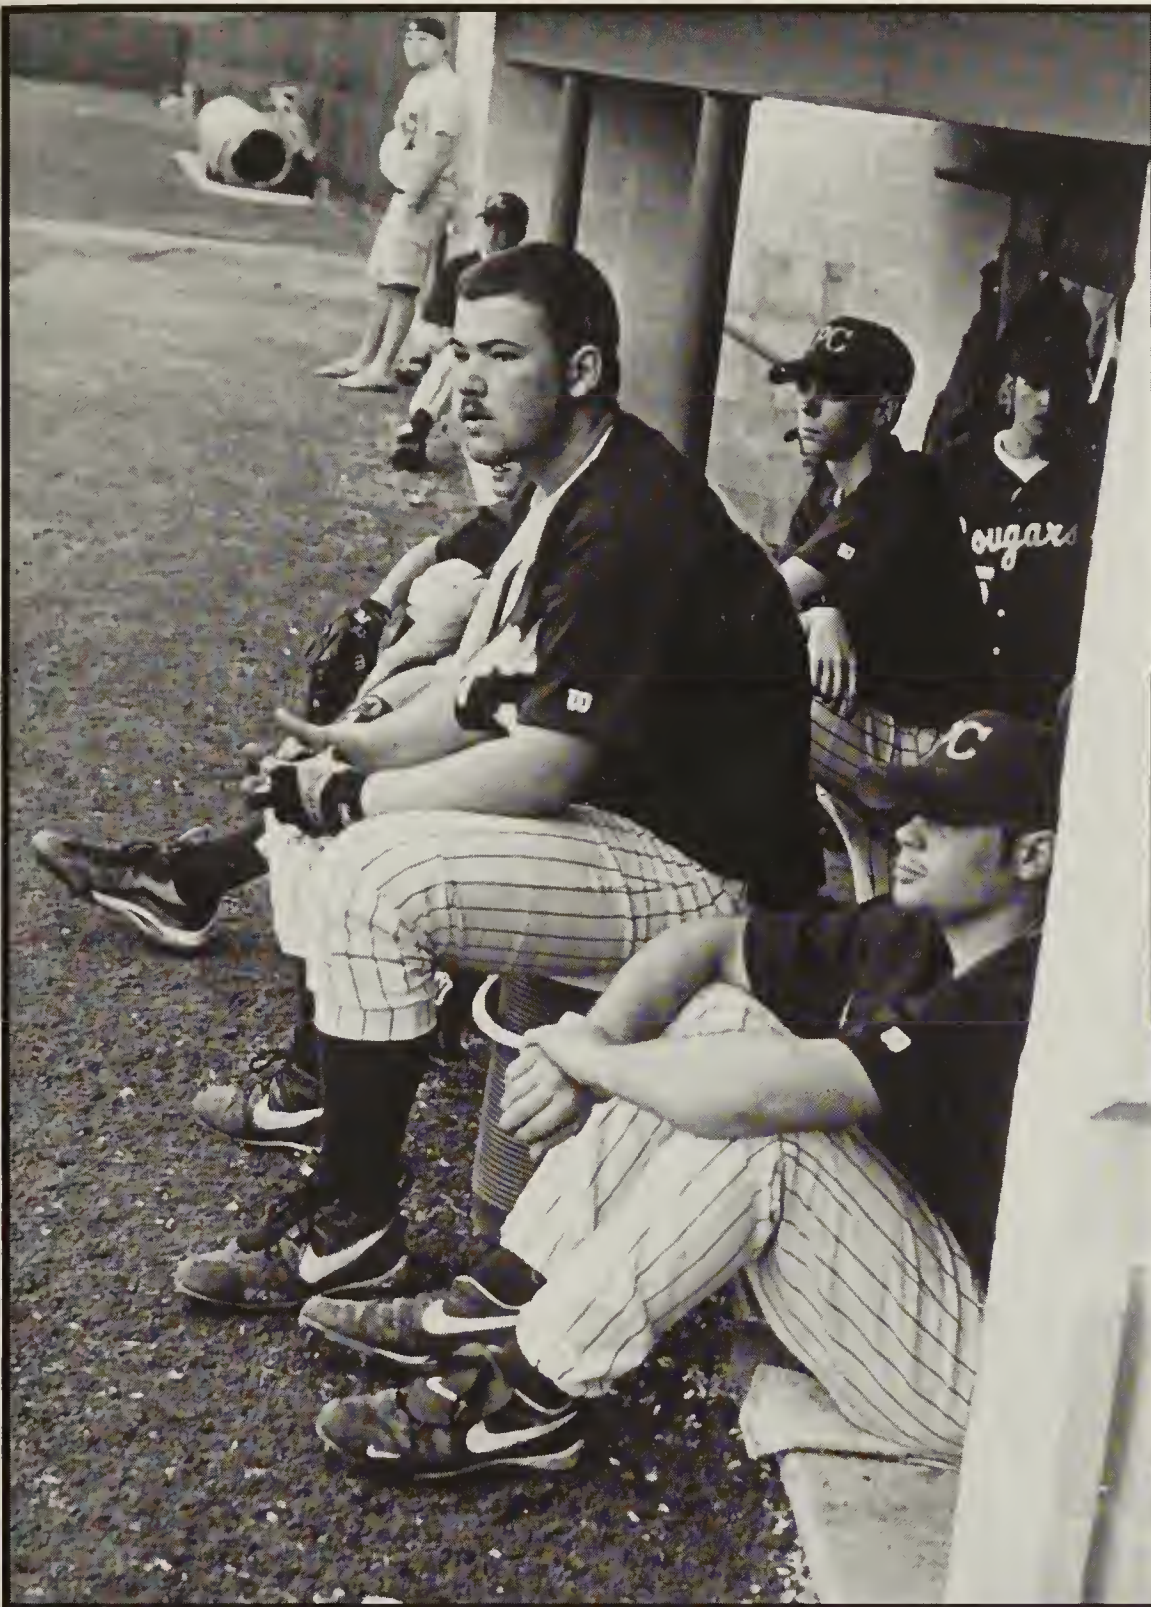

The baseball teams started off on rough roads, but with a great group effort they got tough and going, and paved the way for smoother and better seasons!

Kellen Wolford makes the slide to home in hopes of reaching the base before the ball reaches the catcher.

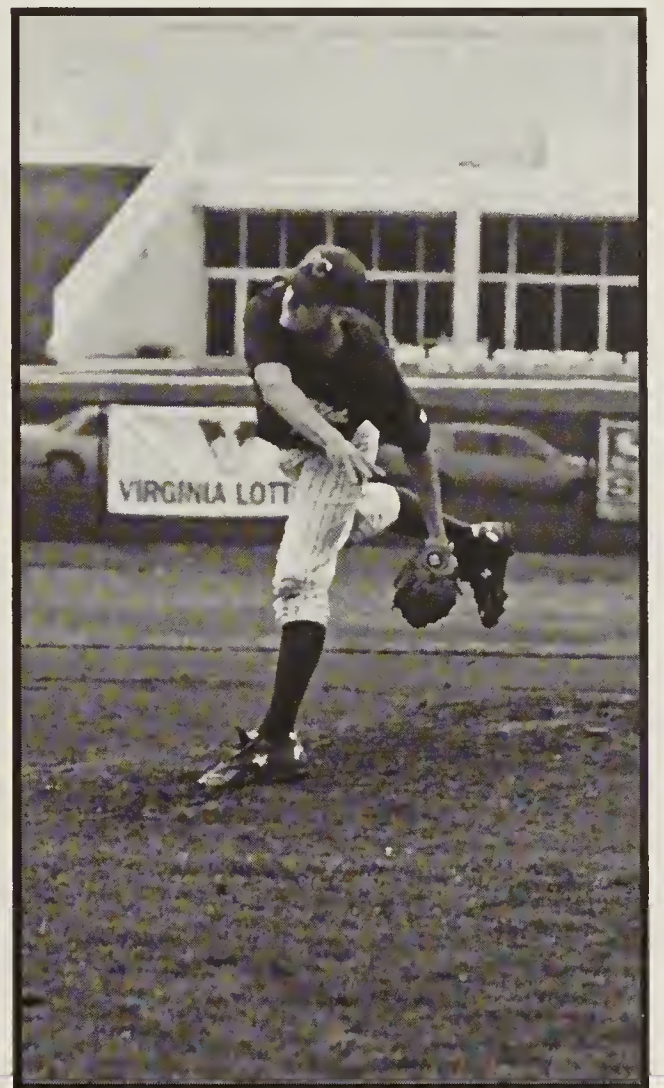

When the going gets tough Travis Roop shows what he is made of and wakes up the outfielders with this hit.

Before heading to bat, team members are found in the dug-out ready and waiting to cheer for a run.

Nothing stops Chris Quesenberry as he lobs this one off the pitchers mound.

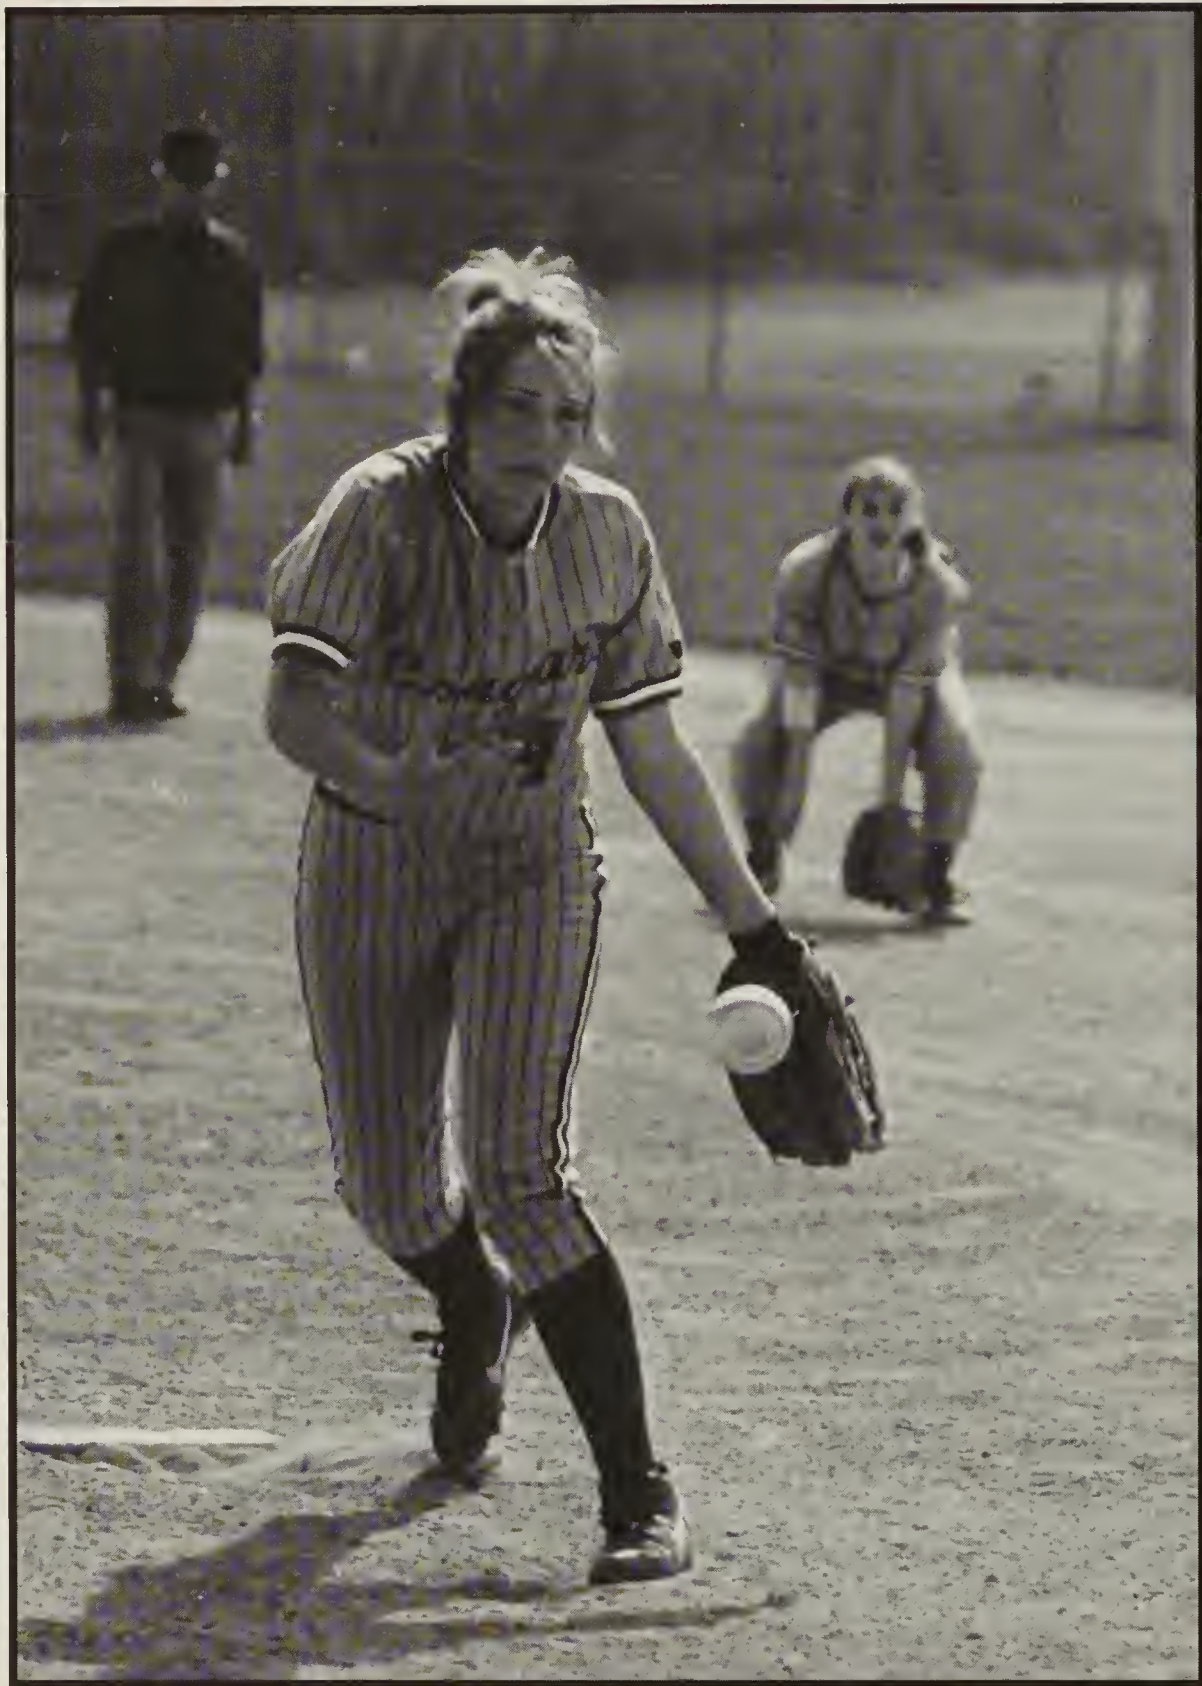

Better luck next time! Kellen Wolford prepares for the ball as the Patriots player barely slips by.

Emily Myers pitches one off the mound, determined to strike out all that face her.

Jessie Mitchell catches an outfield ball in hopes of stopping the runner at second.

Mouse Blevins shows how hard softball can be as she puts forth all her effort to slam this one away.

"There ain't nothing soft about it."

Girls on the J.V. and Varsity softball teams truly felt that the game they played was just as hard, if not harder than baseball. Chasity Wagner commented, "Both baseball and softball require a lot of concentration, love, determination, and dedication." Mandy Crouch said, "Softball gives girls a chance to show the guys that we are better!" According to Stephanie Webb, "Softball is the best."

The J.V. team was made up of girls who all possessed a passion to play softball. They worked well together and enjoyed themselves! Rue Atkins said, "The best part of being on the softball team is that we play so well together." One of the highlights of the girl's season was when they beat Franklin County for the first time in Cougar history! With difficult practices all of the time, the J.V. team made it possible to achieve a rewarding season.

The Varsity team had similar results in their season. Athena Thornton said, "Sometimes we did well, sometimes we didn't." She added, "We will still come out on top, though!" The Varsity players did not only concern themselves with the present baseball season, they also looked toward the future. Jennifer Young exclaimed, "I am looking forward to playing softball until I am too old to get out of bed and do so!" College was also just over the horizon for some of these girls. Mandy Crouch said, "Softball could get me a scholarship to go to a good college."

Both softball teams proved beyond a shadow of a doubt that their game was not "soft." They did this by practicing and playing hard.

Chasity Wagner gets down to business and downs the ball for a bunt and a run to first. "Both baseball and softball require a lot of concentration, love, determination, and dedication," she says.

"From This Moment On"

"From this moment, life has begun..." These are words to Shania Twain's song "From This Moment On," the inspiration for this year's prom theme. Indeed, in a way, a new life had begun for the juniors and seniors attending prom. The night seemed to mark the starting point for the juniors' transition into seniors and the beginning of high school's end for the seniors. Prom, with all its glamor, decoration, and friends, was a great celebration of the past, the present, and the future.

In one word, students described prom in various ways: exciting, fun, beautiful, great, unpredictable... The event meant different things to different people. However, most agree with Suzanne Stauss' feelings, "Prom was all I expected and more!" In fact, numerous individuals felt that this was the best prom in years. Kellie Wheeling commented, "This year, there were better decorations, more lighting, and things were generally more organized." Meghan Linkous was glad that more guys "boogied" this year.

She said, "It made prom so much more fun!"

In order to prolong the fun of this magical event, after prom students did everything from going to the after prom party to camping out. It was sad to see the night end, but prom was just the beginning of the joyous times life will continue to bring throughout the lives of students. The excitement, beauty, greatness, and unpredictability could be described as one of the highlights of life that will be remembered "From This Moment On!"

Seth Davis accepts a hand shake from Mr. Lindstrom and Mr. Hale as he is noticed for graduating with highest honors during the Senior Honor Assembly.

"I hope you had the time of your life."

It was the best of times...It was the worst of times...It was the graduation of the class of 1999. The graduation exercises began with the Senior Honors Assembly at which various honors were bestowed upon seniors and over one million dollars in college scholarships were announced. Next came Baccalaureate, the inspirational ceremony sponsored by the Pulaski County Ministerial Association. At Baccalaureate, Valedictorian, Matt Mansell, and Salutatorian, David Akers, were recognized. Finally, as unbelievable as it seemed, it was time for Commencement — the end of 13 long, yet short years, and the beginning of the rest of the graduates lives. June 11, 1999 was a day which would be indelibly imprinted in the memories of these seniors forever...

It was a seemingly ordinary late spring evening, but there was nothing ordinary about it to those packed into Kenneth J. Dobson Stadium to see PCHS's 25th class of seniors graduate.

Tragically, though not every member of the class could be physically in attendance, they were all there though, remembered and honored by the gold ribbons worn upon the gowns of the graduates, as well as present in the hearts and minds of everyone.

A group of outstanding individuals walked across the stage, received their diplomas, and stepped off on the other side into the start of a new world, which they themselves would create. The feelings of the graduates were mixed and hard to describe, but love was one emotion that could be felt strongly. In a year filled with hate driven actions in schools, the class of 1999 proved that love conquers all. It seemed as if all that mattered to them was each other. Diploma in hand and the Commencement ceremony over, students clung to one another like there was no tomorrow. Indeed, for many, there would be no tomorrow together. Life would drift them in different directions, and for that, an ocean of tears was shed.

These tears, once shed by kindergartners upon having to attend the first day of school and all the uncertainties that it brings, had been transformed. They had become tears shed by graduates upon having to bid farewell to the years of school, which had become so certain and the people, who had become intrinsic parts of their existences. It was time for them to greet an unpredictable future, which had once seemed so far away. But however unpredictable the future may have been, it was made brighter by the enlightening experiences offered by 13 years of school, teachers, and peers.

Mr. Bill Meyer, chosen by seniors to give opening thoughts, concluded his speech with these words from a song by Green Day, "I hope you had the time of your life." Most graduates felt that they certainly had.

Mr. Paul Hale makes the opening remarks with the other school administrators and the senior class officers on stage.

Caps are thrown in celebration at the end of the Commencement Ceremony.

Heavenly Smiles

(In Loving Memory of My Sister Jennifer)

Can you spare a smile? Mine has suddenly washed away.
I can't seem to find it anywhere, though I've looked for it night and day.

I think my sister took it with her to her magnificent new home in the sky,
And I caught a glimpse of her grin as I was sadly passing by.

I know it must upset her that she accidentally took mine on her trip.
But wait, I see something falling from the sky with a bounce and a flip.

It has floated straight into my hands as I nervously open them wide,
And a smile comes over my face with care, comfort and pride.

My sister must have dropped it as she skipped the clouds one by one.
I know she must be happy because a rainbow just emerged from the sun.

So you can keep your smile but remind others to share their with love.
If you happen to lose it one day, Jenny will send you one from above.

Laura Stanley

"She was a true joy and so full of life! She would walk in the room and brighten it everyday with her smile and excitement!"

— Mr. Marunich

To My Sister With Love

Not having you here to brighten my day,
Shows me how fast life can slip away.
In my heart I know you'll be,
But it's not the same as you here smiling at me.
Terri, I know you'll never be sad,
But the point of you dying hurts me and makes me so mad.
You didn't deserve the cost you had to pay,
I just wish it would have been me on that horrible day.
I just have one last thing to say,
Sissy I'll see you one sweet day.

Ricky Dunagan

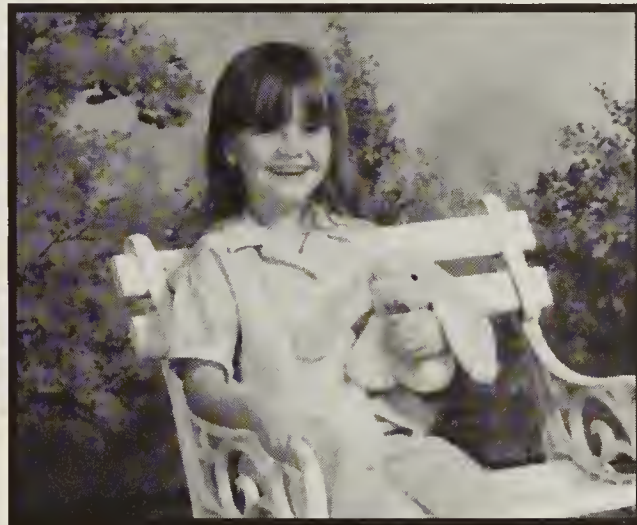

In Memory of Terri Lynn Dunagan

When you went away, it took our breath away. We could not understand why he took you that day. So many hopes and dreams that will never become. Graduation day is coming soon and we will cheer for you too.

You were so proud and we were proud of you. That night our lives turned around and now we live our days for you. We love and miss you and we still do not understand, but we know you are up in heaven smiling down. What keeps us going is knowing we will be together again one day, our sweet friend.

We love and miss you!

Chasity Diane Gravley

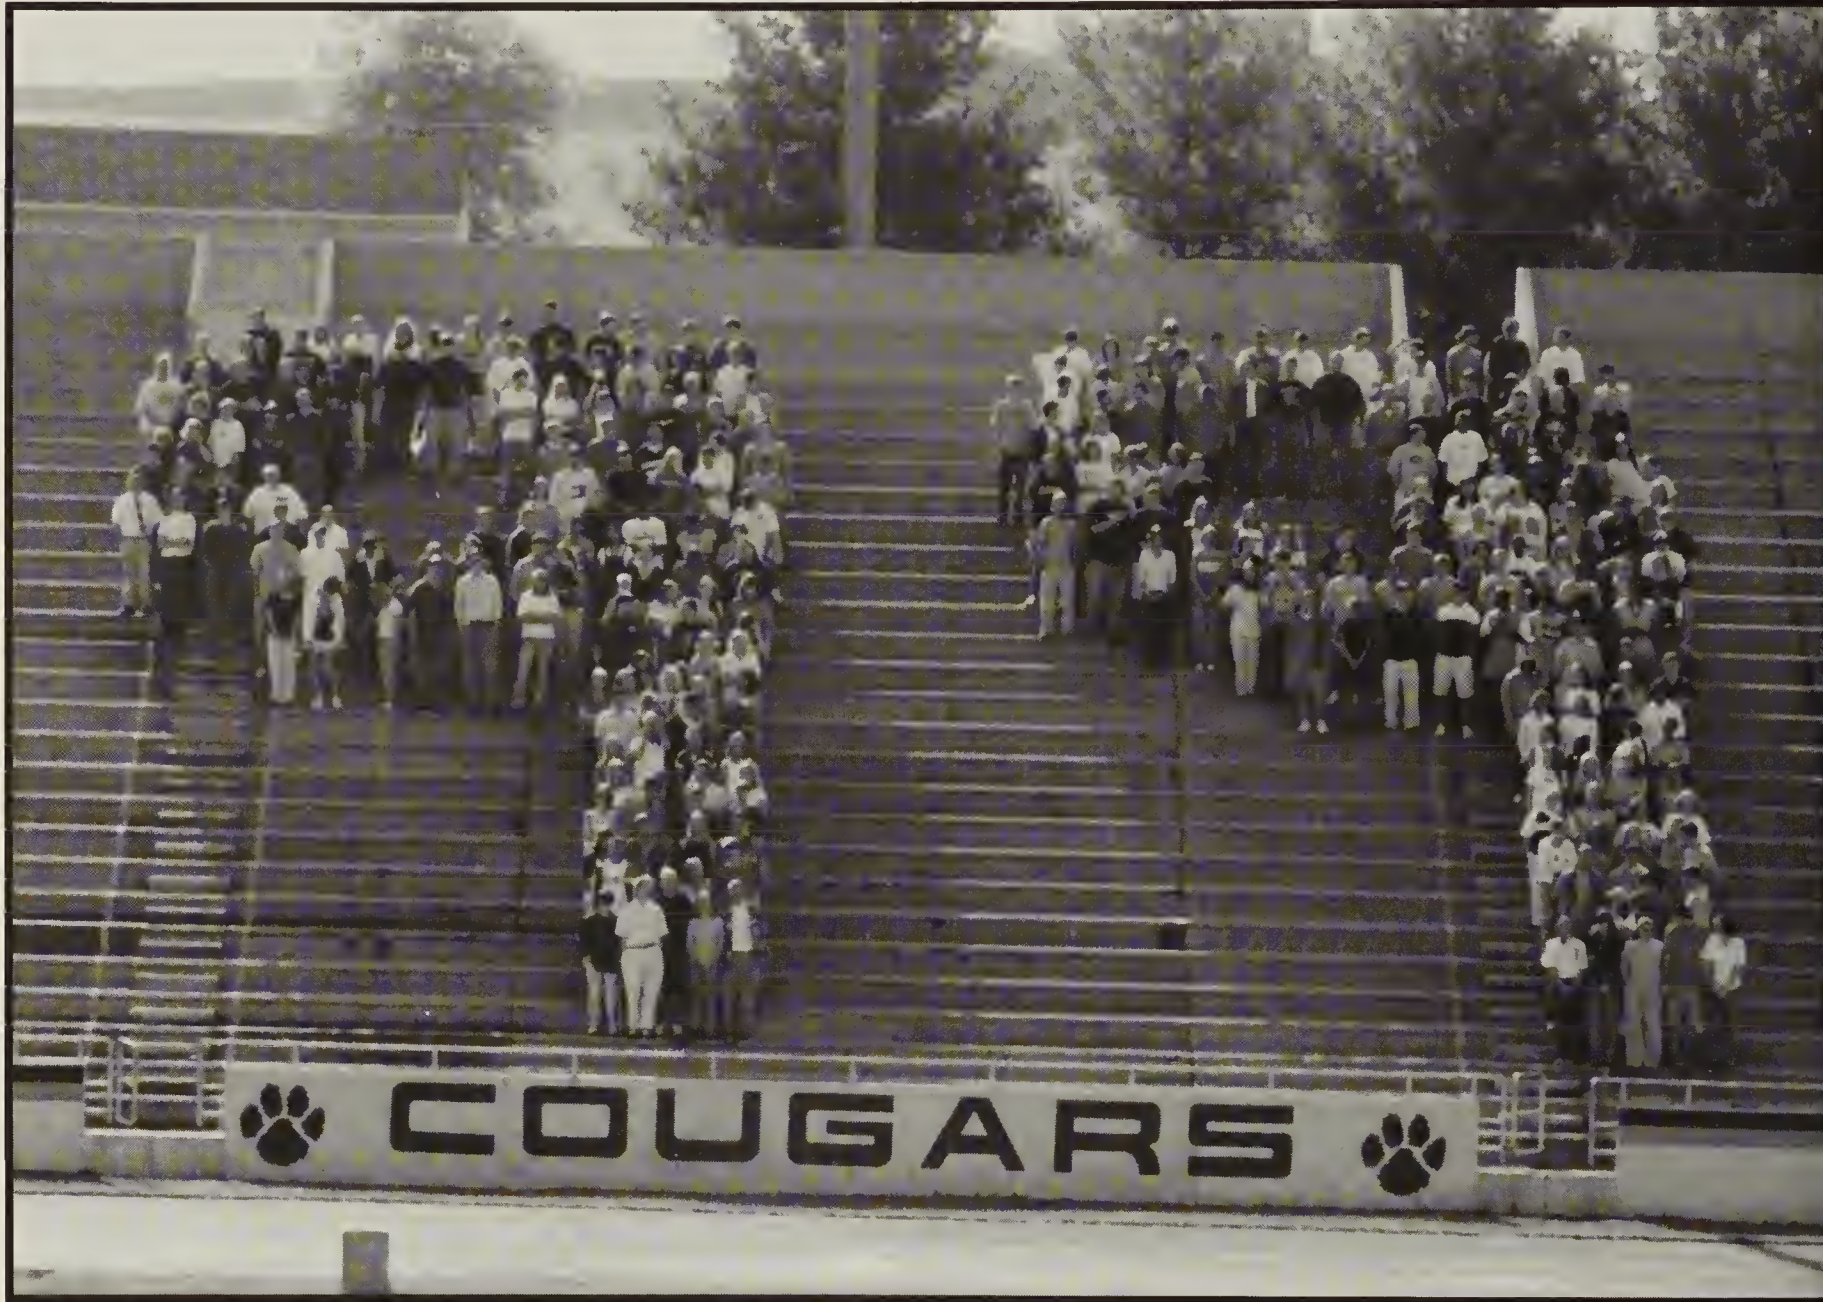

Terri Lynn Dunagan
September 18, 1981 — April 17, 1999

The moment is here, we looked forward to today,
But you are not here I am sorry to say.
All our years of hard work has come,
And graduation without you won't be the same.
It seems like yesterday we learned to read and write,
And Terri it is so hard to believe you were taken that night.
I know the day has come when we will spread our wings and fly,
But just because we are graduating without you does not mean goodbye.
Your memories will stay with us for many years to come.
We will always remember the good times and the hard work you have done.
So when we throw our caps high in the sky,
I know it will be by your wind that makes them fly.

National Honor Society

President Matt Mansell discusses the sign-up for PTA teacher snacks and paper recycling with Adam Turman.

Scholarship, leadership, service, character...these were the requirements that the members of the National Honor Society had to meet to be inducted into the club. Athena Thornton said, "The NHS qualifications are difficult to attain and maintain." Once in the club, members used their qualities to help others. Each member brought to the group individual strong points — and with everyone working together, much was accomplished.

The National Honor Society strived to serve the community, and in some cases, the world, through its many projects. Members participated in a tutoring program, helped with Special Olympic basketball, did various Christmas service activities, and organized a school-wide recycling project. Current members also worked to prepare for the induction assembly for new members in the spring. They wanted to make it as special for the new members as it was for them! Members collaboratively coordinated these projects in various meetings, conducted by Matt Mansell, the club's president. Matt said, "I get satisfaction from seeing the progress the whole club makes."

The National Honor Society made a persevering attempt to make a difference. The members of the club knew what their missions were and they accomplished them!

Speaking Out Forensics Club

Have you ever gotten up in front of an audience to deliver a speech and either froze up, not being able to move, or started shaking so badly you could not even hold your notes? Well don't worry, it happens to the best of us...but not the members of the Forensics team. They were able to overcome any fear of performing for an audience; in fact, they loved it!

Crystal Osborne said, "Getting up in front of people and expressing myself is something I enjoy." Other members of the Forensics team felt the same way. Loni Miller said, "It helps me express my inner creativity." In order to display their talents in artistic expression, students involved in Forensics also took the opportunity to compete in district and regional competitions. The prepared for these competitions in club meetings by discussing the competition requirements, practicing pieces, and critiquing one another.

Participating in the Forensics club was a way for students with exceptional abilities in acting and speaking to excel even further!

David Rakestraw says, "I really enjoy practicing my speaking in front of Mrs. Ficke and the club members. It's good practice!"

What skit is Jayson Grimes humoring the club with now? Forensics allows him to experiment with a variety of different speaking and presenting techniques.

"A League of Their Own"

Art League

Art students who showed exceptional artistic ability, possessed a willingness to better themselves, and participated well in class were invited to join the Art League. The invitation put members in "a league of their own!"

The members of the Art League participated in various activities to enhance their love of art. The group painted faces at the Volvo children's Christmas party, sponsored two school art shows, and participated in a Christmas ornament workshop. Chrissy Selleck said, "It's cool." R.J. Davis said, "We do lots of fun things." Speaking of "fun things," the Art League even took a spring trip to New York! In order to raise money for the trip, the club participated in numerous fundraisers, including the sale of a calendar featuring pen and ink drawings by students.

The members of the Art League were certainly in a league of their own when it came to artistic ability! They, in the words of Mr. Hester, "Brought student artwork to the attention of the school and the community!"

Dare to Prepare

Vocational Industrial Clubs of America

Members of VICA, Vocational Industrial Clubs of America, dared to prepare — for their futures and careers! They learned to, in the words of State Vice President, Aaron Morris, “Foster a deep respect for the dignity of work.” But not only did they prepare themselves for the world of work, they worked to help others by participating in worthy service projects.

If you asked a member of VICA to tell about his/her club, you would hear nothing but positive enthusiasm. Jason Woodyard said, “VICA offered the best opportunities for me to further my education.” He went on to say, “VICA rules!” Aaron Morris said, “VICA helped me choose my future before it chose me.”

Through all of this “future preparing,” VICA also collected soda can tabs to raise money for kidney dialysis patients, helped with Toys-For-Tots, cleaned up Claytor Lake State Park, and raised money for the club. In addition to these projects, VICA members participated in the Officer Leadership Training Institute and various local, district, state, and national competitions. Jared Akers said, “We address important matters in VICA and participate in good learning experiences.”

VICA members got head starts in their races towards the future by setting high expectations and goals and building upon their dreams. While doing this, they helped others and had a blast! Jocelyn Pittman said, “Come join us and you’ll see what we mean!”

Master Minds

Mountain Academic Competition Conference

MACC (Mountain Academic Competition Conference), consisting of All-Around, English, Math, Science, and Social Studies teams, represented the school well by competing against other schools in matches testing their knowledge. Members of the individual MACC teams were master minds of their subject matter!

MACC members had various reasons for joining their respective teams. Carrie Hodge said she joined English MACC because she "enjoys reading and discussing the material." Matt Mansell gave a liking for Jeopardy as the reason for joining All-Around MACC. Chris Hawks simply said, "It's a way to be exposed to new knowledge." Mr. Wooten, the Math MACC coach, said, "I took the position as coach because I love Math!" Still others gave fellowship with friends as the reason for participating in MACC.

Their reasons for joining MACC may have been different, but MACC member's dedication to their teams was the same! Mandy Allen said, "We do lots of preparation for the competitions and review good competition skills." Carrie Hodge stated, "We practice old meet questions and discuss new material." For the Math MACC team, if all of this hard work and practice proved to pay off and the team won a match, then the members were treated to a pizza party. At the beginning of the MACC season, Mr. Wooten said, "We hope to have consumed lots of pizza by the end of March!"

The members of the MACC teams were dedicated to learning and expressing new knowledge. They were the master minds of PCHS!

"What?" thinks Mandy Allen as she and a few other members of English MACC study their short story material.

"Interesting," thinks Mrs. Snow while she and Courtney Mabry look over some sample English MACC questions.

Member of the Math MACC team confer on an answer. Already smelling their pizza, they strived to calculate quickly and solve the problems.

Service With a Smile

LEO

If you saw a Leo member out serving the community, chances are, he/she was smiling! Leo members were dedicated to bettering the community and they had fun doing it!

Leo members became involved in numerous projects to help others. In fact, service to others was the entire focus of the club. The group began the year by participating in a walk for diabetes. They also cleaned the fairgrounds after the craft show in the fall, passed out flyers for the flea market at football games, and participated in the Christmas parade handing out candy and bracelets. These students' service continued into the Christmas season when the club brightened Head Start children's faces with lots of presents! Club members enjoyed every minute of these services. Suzanne Stauss said, "I always have fun and I know that I'm helping people at the same time."

The Leo club's service didn't end with Christmas projects. Members extended their helping hands into even more causes. The club launched a major fundraiser for Habitat for Humanity and, among other things, helped with basketball and track and field in the Special Olympics. Tara Morris said, "I enjoy participating in Leo for several reasons, but most of all I like helping my community and being with friends."

Leo's devotion to making a difference was certainly evident! You could see it on the smiling faces of club members and the faces of those being helped!

Agriculture Addicts

Future Farmers of America

You wouldn't think that having an addiction would be a good thing; but for the members of FFA, Future Farmers of America, it was! In fact, the Pulaski County chapter of FFA had many addictions — addictions to agricultural education, leadership, fun, and service! Jake Adams said, "The club's purpose is to help young agriculturists improve themselves, the people around them, and the places around them through leadership and personal training."

Throughout the winter and spring months, FFA members participated in events such as parliamentary procedures, prepared public speaking, extemporaneous public speaking, and the FFA creed competition. In order to raise money for these competitions and other FFA events, the club launched a very successful fruit sale. All the while members of FFA had loads of fun and showed leadership in the community!

If you asked any FFA member about the club, he/she would be eager to spread the FFA addiction! Courtney Farris said, "I really enjoy being a member of FFA and I even hope to be an officer next year." Jake Adams summed it up well when he said, "We would like to see everyone join FFA!"

These FFA students were presented trophies after shooting the largest buck in the hunting season contest.

Healthy Habits

Health Occupation Students of America

Do you have a habit? The members of HOSA (Health Occupations Students of America) had numerous healthy habits, which included preparing for their future in the health care field, taking on leadership roles, and helping others. These healthy habits benefited the school, the community, and club members themselves!

Under the leadership of President Kristi Hodges and Vice President Erica Stables, the club accomplished much. Erica Stables said, "We like to do for others and the community." Members, among other things, raised money for the Make-A-Wish Foundation, helped a needy family at Christmas, attended the Fall Leadership Academy at Emory and Henry, and still found time to win first place in our Homecoming banner competition. The club also helped the community by spreading healthful messages. Andi McCraw said, "We learn and then teach our community about the importance of health care."

In other words, HOSA members' healthy habits helped make a healthy community.

A Balancing Act

Future Homemakers of America and Home Economics Related Occupations

If you are planning on having a career and a family someday, the FHA/HERO is the club for you. Future Homemakers of America and Home Economics Related Occupations did not just teach it's members how to sew! Members learned how to be healthy and happy, while balancing a family and a career. Amanda Rupe said, "The club's prupose is to help get you ready for the future." FHA/HERO members also worked to build a strong community by helping people in their area! Aleshia Martin said, "FHA is fun and exciting."

"A World of Pure Imagination"

Drama Club

Drama was an excellent club for those who had always felt drawn to acting. The club provided opportunities for students to become involved in various productions, which expanded their on-stage experiences and thrust them into "a world of pure imagination."

Students first realized their interests in Drama in different ways. Jimmy Ward said, "I loved to watch plays at Radford University and this is what got me interested in Drama." Alicia Gallimore said, "I discovered that I like to get on stage and become someone else." Regardless of what introduced students to theater, once they became actively involved in the Drama club, they devoted three to four hours of their time everyday for after-school practice. This dedication was truly evident and it created productions worthy of acclaim. Drama could certainly be seen at its best in: Waiting for Godot, Willy Wonka and the Chocolate Factory, "Through the Golden Door," and Bye Bye Birdy. One of these plays, "Through the Golden Door," was actually written by two seniors, Jayson Grimes and Eric Southern, who both plan to enhance their talents at schools in New York after graduation.

Jayson Grimes and Eric Southern said, "To act is to believe what is unbelievable." Through its productions, Drama created "a world of pure imagination" for themselves and all of the community to experience.

Crystal Farris and Justin Underwood converse about the life they left before crossing the ocean to New York.

Lights, Camera, Action!

Video Club

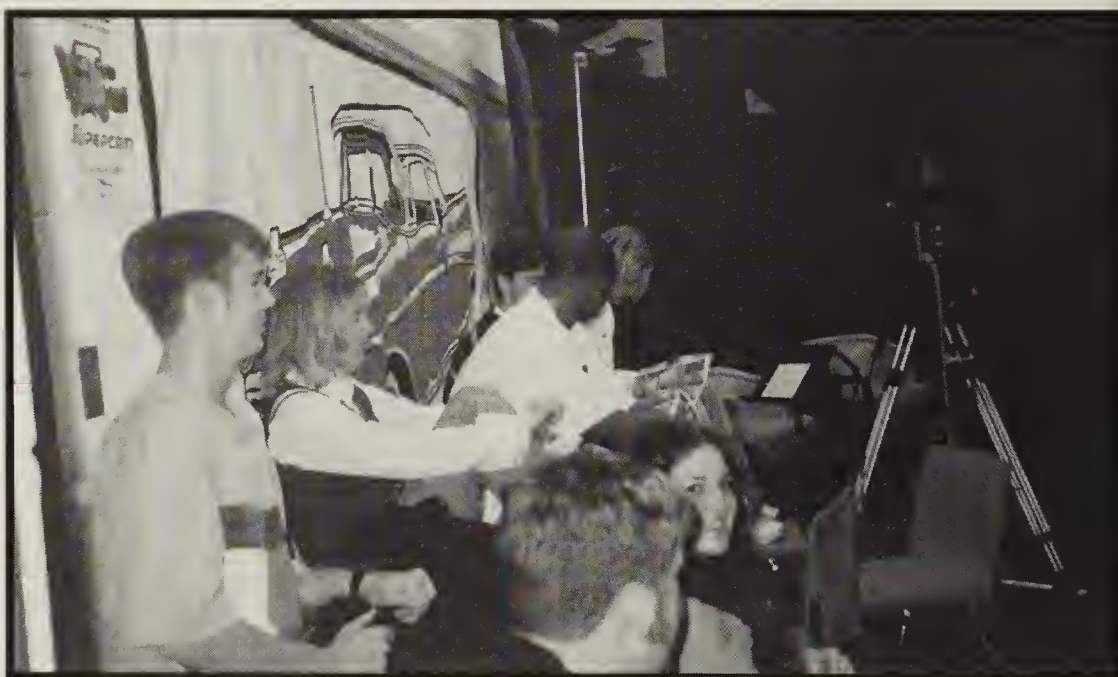

Students who were involved in the Video club produced, edited, and starred in videos, documenting the events of the school year. Keith Ferrel said, "Making videos that people are going to watch is fun." Feeling the same way, Cameron Ashworth stated, "I like to experience the thrill of video-taping." The money raised from the sale of these videos went to worthy causes. Greg Canevari, vice president of the club, said, "Video production is interesting and it's great because most of our money goes to good causes." The club produced videos for, among other things, various assemblies, Homecoming, and Prom. It helped PCHS make memories that will not soon be forgotten!

Watch this! John Phillips works on a project in the video class' control room.

The second semester video class takes time out of class in February for a picture. Their service to the school will be needed greatly in the spring when they are responsible for videoing prom and graduation.

Technological Exploration

Technology Student Association

TSA, the Technology Student Association, in the words of club sponsor, Mr. Weschke, was established "to explore different technologies." Students involved in the club were also members of a technology class. By participating in TSA, students were able to go beyond their classroom experiences and learn even more! During club meetings, students listened to guest speakers and watched educational videos. The club even went on a field trip to the Kollmorgen Corporation to observe its operation. TSA had a fund-raiser in order to support the costs of its activities.

Taking a Stand

Students For Christ

Those who participated in SFC (Students For Christ) possessed strong religious convictions. Through the club, they were able to make a stand for Christ.

Christen Bane said, "We praise God and teach others what we believe." The club members felt pride in doing this and took much enjoyment from it as well. Marlena Taylor said, "We sing songs, have guest speakers, and just enjoy fellowship in general!" The club also participated in the annual "See you at the flag pole," a morning prayer to which all were invited.

Most club members would echo Christen Bane's exclamation: "I love this club and I love Jesus Christ!"

After the student body was enthralled with the speaker at the Investments in Learning Assembly, SFC invited him back for a motivational club meeting.

The green outside the Commons was cluttered with students at "See you at the flag pole." The event is so big that it even pulls in students from outside the club.

Students and teachers come together to pray at the pole. Faith Griffith said, "I was pleased with the attendance of the event. It really makes me happy to see so many people openly expressing their beliefs!"

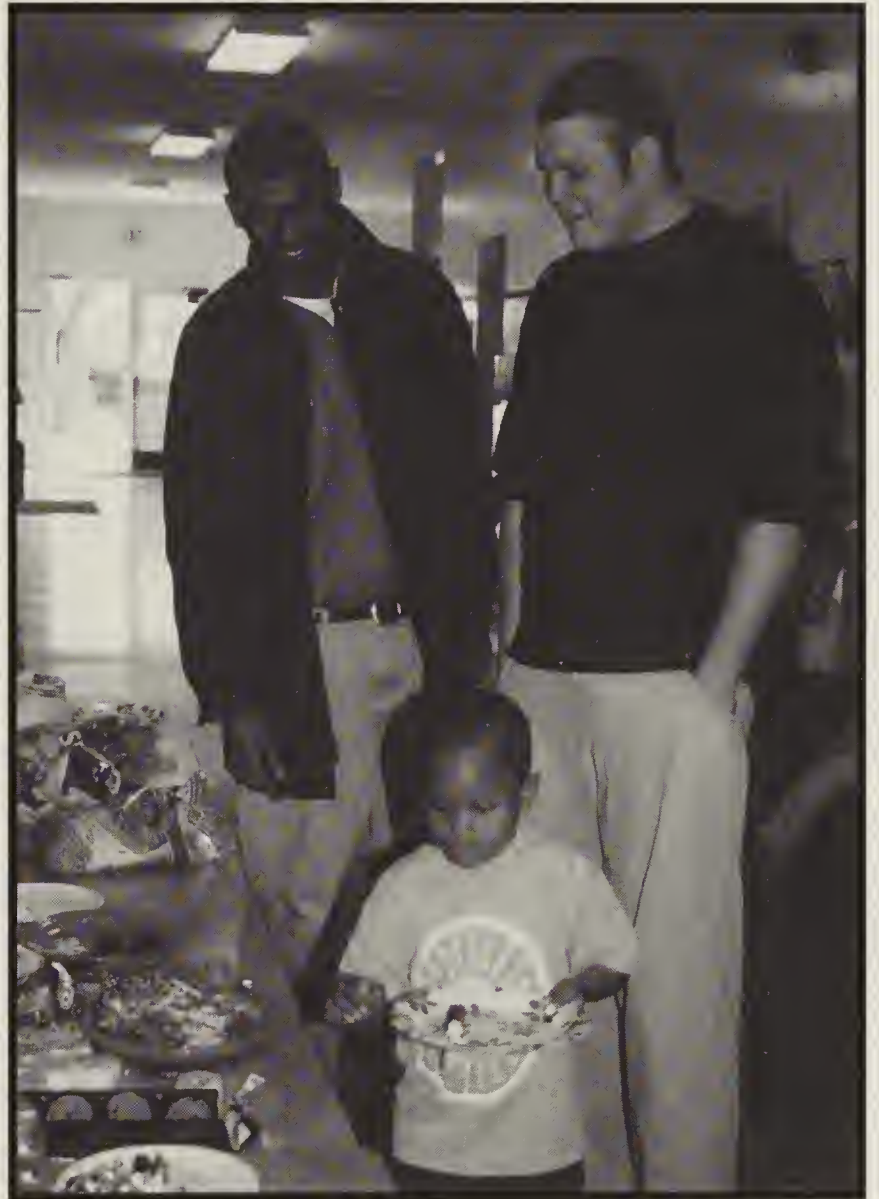

Onward Christian Athletes

Fellowship of Christian Athletes

FCA, Fellowship of Christian Athletes, was more active than ever! The group's dedication to Christian principles drove them to work their hardest to help others and spread positive messages.

The club certainly made its presence felt in the community. Members planned a Christmas party for Head Start children, organized a rally with former pro-football players who had played in the Super Bowl, heard several other guest speakers, and even took a caving trip. In all of these activities, students remembered the purpose of the club. Bev Fuller and Kristi Hodges said, "Through activities, FCA tries to bring people closer to God and each other." The club succeeded in doing this and also provided members with good times! Kellie Wheeling said, "I really enjoy spending time with my friends and the various activities we do."

Members of FCA were positively enthusiastic about their faith — and they showed this enthusiasm all over the community!

Profitable Ventures

Future Business Leaders of America

FBLA, Future Business Leaders of America, was a beneficial club to members themselves, as well as the community. Andrea Hale said, "FBLA provides a chance to discuss and explore the opportunities presented to young people in the business field."

Students involved in the club made numerous "profitable ventures" such as, attending the FBLA New River Region Fall Conference, participating in a Toys for Tots drive, planning the Snow King and Queen events in order to raise money for childhood cancer through Project ASK, and participating in regional and state competitions. Members of FBLA enjoyed the fellowship of the club as well. Kelly Ferrell said, "I like FBLA because it gives me a chance to work with people from other schools."

Katrina Clark summed it up best by saying, "FBLA is a club in which anyone can excel!"

Investment in the Future

Distributive Education Club of America

DECA, An Association of Marketing Students, was a club committed to helping members find a place for themselves in the future. Stacy Haynes said, "I know that my involvement in DECA will help me with jobs later in my life." The club promoted vocational understanding, civic consciousness, leadership development, and social intelligence. Activities, which helped students realize these goals, included various fundraisers, district and state competitions, Christmas projects to help underprivileged families, work with a local nursing home, and a field trip to Virginia Tech. Kelli Walters said, "I've learned a lot that will help me after I move out and have to support myself." Spring semester competitions also proved valuable as students were tested on their expertise and people skills when on the job in a social environment.

By being active members of DECA, students made wise investments in their futures!

Decisions, Decisions, Decisions...

Students Against Destructive Decisions

It is always hard to make a decision, especially when that decision could change your life. SADD, Students Against Destructive Decisions, was a club devoted to helping youth make wise choices. The club did this by promoting community awareness of issues pertaining to teenagers — substance abuse and drinking and driving among other.

Club members, working in conjunction with the Youth/Adult Partnership program, designed in implemented projects aimed towards diminishing substance abuse in our community. April Quesenberry said, "I joined SADD because I felt something should be done about the alcohol abuse in Pulaski County." The club participated in numerous dinner meetings and group gatherings to work on achieving its goals. SADD was particularly active prior to Prom, hoping to prevent students from making the decision to drink an drive. Lee Williams said, "I am glad that students this year had the opportunity to take part in SADD. It presents important issues that we should shape our lives around."

SADD was a truly positive presence in the community. Hopefully, the club will continue driving students to make healthy decisions for years to come!

Do you know the right thing to do? Club members learn about and discuss decisions, actions, and consequences.

Life is full of choices! Stashia Steffani, a SADD officer, conducts the meeting and talks about the importance of avoiding destructive decisions.

Exploring History

African American History Club

The average student avoids history as often as possible, but that is not what the members of the African American History Club did. They jumped right into the past while looking toward the future!

The AAHC participated in many mind-broadening experiences. Ashlie Smith said, "The purpose of the club is to teach the truth about black history." Bev Fuller said, "The club educates black people of the historical past." This education was achieved through a Martin Luther King celebration, trips to black colleges, discussions about history, and much more! The group even planned a trip to Atlanta. Dwayne Burks said, "I really like learning about famous blacks."

AAHC club members were committed to learning about black history, and by participating in the club, students positively affected their futures!

Enjoy the moment! In or out of school, many AAHC members spend a lot of fun time together.

Bringing Poetry to Life

Poetry Club

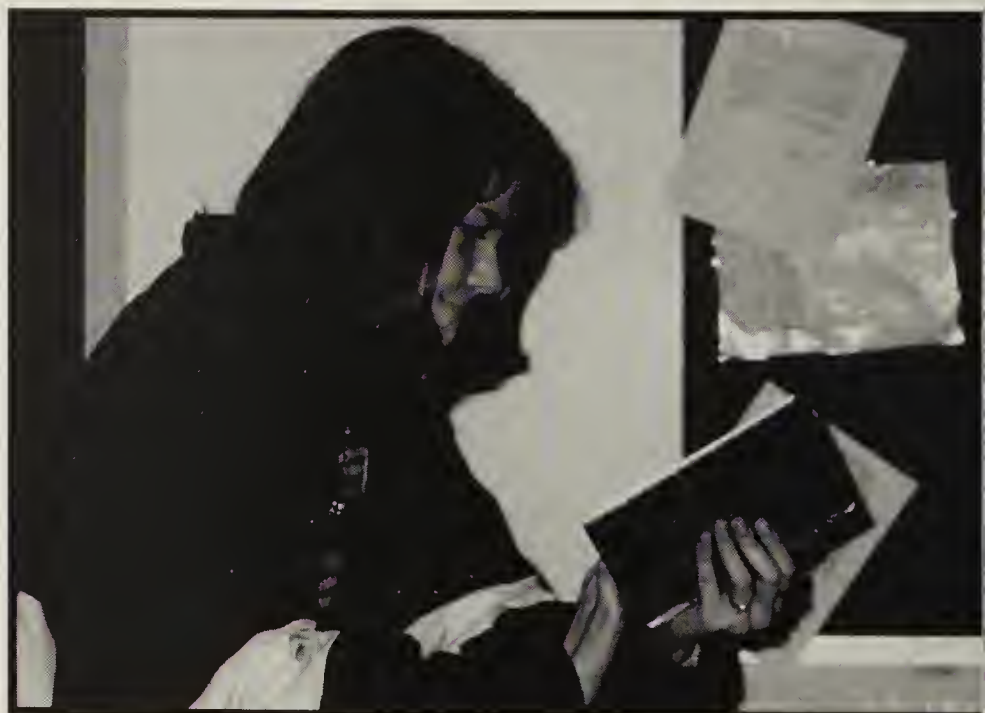

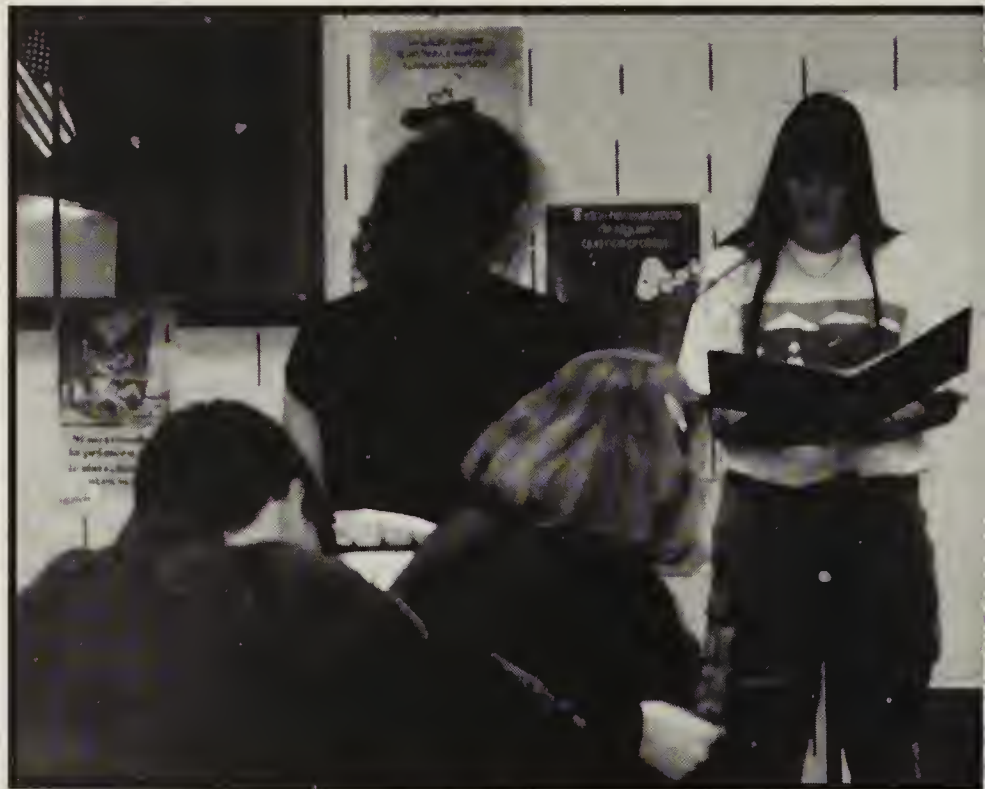

The Poetry club was a great new arrival to student activities created by Crystal Farris and Katie Simpkins under the guidance of Dr. Parks, this club was successful in bringing poetry to life! Katie Simpkins said, "The club's purpose is to encourage the oral reading of new types of poetry, while keeping an open mind to different thoughts and opinions." Members participated in a variety of activities, which emphasized creativity, such as sharing their own poetry with one another, evaluating and discussing the works of established poets, and inviting some of these poets to speak at club meetings. Katie Simpkins said, "Now literature lovers like me have a club that seems tailor-made for people who express themselves through writing."

Mastering the Moves

Chess Team

The chess team was a group of individuals who enjoyed challenging their minds and having a good time. Matthew Beasley said, "In practices, we work on developing our reasoning skills." The students on the team met the mental challenge, which chess put forth by working together to help one another improve their skills in playing the game. Matthew Beasley said, "My friends on the team help me learn how to play the game better." They showed their great skills in competitions on both the state and the national levels. It was obvious that this group had mastered the moves of chess!

The Great Outdoors

Outing Club

Are you one of those people who are terrified of heights, screeches at the sight of a bug, wishes that snow everywhere would just melt away, or would not dream of spending the night anywhere that did not have four walls and a ceiling? If you are, then you would definitely not be an ideal member of the Outing club. This club, which was designed for members to have fun while appreciating the great outdoors, enjoyed various activities, such as rock climbing, hiking, skiing, and camping. Mary Hale said, "The purpose of the club is to get students involved in outdoor activities." Abby Williams said, "It's fun!"

Students who were actively involved in the Outing club pushed themselves to their physical and mental limits with every new adventure!

German Geniuses

Virginia Organization of German Students

VOGS, the Virginia Organization of German Students, was a club which gave students the opportunity to increase their usage of the language and learn about the culture from which it comes.

From learning history about Germany to having lunch each Wednesday together in order to practice using the German language, students were involved in various activities, which enhanced their love of the German culture. Heidi Jennings said, "I like this club because I am able to continue the German which I have learned." The group even planned trips to a Holocaust Museum in Washington, D.C. and Busch Gardens. Elizabeth Webb said, "Our activities are used as learning experiences and they are also for fun."

By being members of VOGS, students were transformed into German geniuses!

4-H x 2

PVTP 4-H and 4-H Clubs

Everyone knows about the benefits of 4-H clubs across the country. Here at PCHS, we were fortunate to have two 4-H clubs. Both clubs were fairly new to our club scene, but they did not waste any time establishing themselves as active leaders, as well as competitive participants!

PVTP 4-H got off to an energetic start. Officers were chosen right away in order to lead the club to success. Club members enjoyed the various activities in which they were given the opportunity to participate. In meetings, the club learned parliamentary procedures, recited the 4-H pledge, listened to guest speakers, participated in group discussions, and even sang. The club also raised money by selling candy. Gerald Kidd said, "The club is very enjoyable and has a good group of members." Timmy Freeman said, "I highly recommend this club!"

The other 4-H club also came highly recommended. Under the leadership of Brian Hollins, the club's president, 4-H members were active in the community. In his words the club's purpose was to "work with young 4-H kids and to help the community." Jake Adams, vice president of the club said, "Our group is here to promote youth activities and leadership, and to improve the community through projects and service." Students involved in the club built a float for the local Christmas parades, delighted young 4-H members by dressing like Santa, conducted leadership seminars for 4-H camp, and of course, worked with animals. Brian Hollins said, "I like being involved in 4-H because I can practice leadership skills and I get to work with little kids."

Members of both 4-H clubs were active members of the school and the community. 4-H times two equals great activities and a whole lot of fun!

Steering PCHS in the Right Direction

Student Council Association & Student Government Association

The Student Council Association and the Student Government Association were both groups of leadership for our school. Together they steered us in the right direction!

The Student Council Association, elected by the student body, consisted of President, Tanesha Harvey; Vice President, Erin Rainey; Secretary, Tonya Macy; and Treasurer, Matt Wigginton. These individuals possessed the leadership skills needed to represent their peers well, bringing student ideas and concerns to the attention of the school's administration. Tanesha Harvey said, "I decided to run for office because I felt I could represent our school in a positive way."

The Student Government Association was made up of the individual class officers who modeled themselves to represent their class as a whole. A major job of the SGA members was to decorate their classes showcase, mural, locker banks, and banners for the Homecoming festivities. After beautiful decorations, they had proved that they were capable of representing their classes. They finalized the year with the new elections of next year's officers, coating the walls with campaign banners once again.

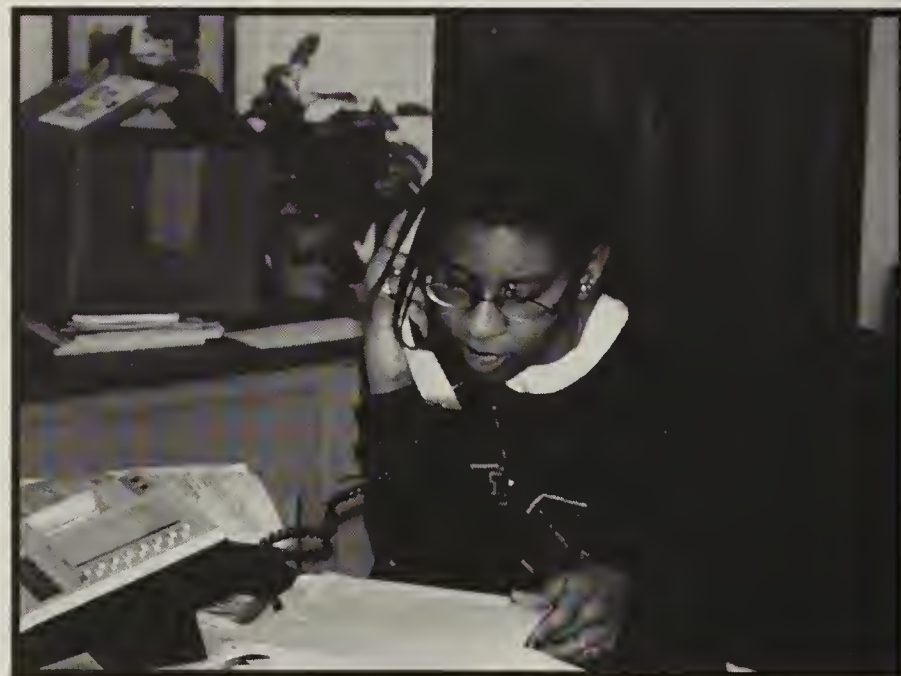

The SCA and SGA were at the forefront of student life. These groups took their jobs seriously and created a year full of achievements!

Junior class officers Paul Taylor and Shara Wenrich work with Mr. McCoy to brainstorm ideas for the theme of this year's prom.

Campaign posters are scattered throughout the school during elections. You can find them on the walls, in the locker banks, and in the classrooms just to name a few.

The Show Must Go On...

This brings an end to a year at Pulaski County High School and draws closure to one scene of its existence as a never-ending play. Those of us who experienced this time in PCHS's life probably felt that it was a momentous occasion. In reality, this year was only, in the greater scheme of things, a minuscule piece of the school's 25-year history and its future to come.

Many of us will be back next year; but some of us will move on, leaving roles for new students to fill. Within each new student, a star will be born and with each year, a new scene will be perfected. But we, the present performers, can all make this scene's, this year's, events and experiences stand out by using them in our futures to better the world. In this way, the 1998-1999 school year will never fall into obscurity; and the show that is Pulaski County High School will go on, made better by the small part we contributed to its whole!

The 1999 Cougar Pinnacle was published by Taylor Publishing Company, Knoxville, Tennessee. It was printed by Taylor Publishing in Dallas, Texas. The Taylor Representative was Ben Smith. The in plant customer service advisor was Jerry Steely.

The cover was identical to the 1974 yearbook with minor die changes and color alterations.

Body copy was set in Genesis Bold 12 point, and captions in Genesis Bold 11 point. Headings appeared in the following fonts: Opening in Caslon Openface, Student Life in Vanguard, Courses in Brush, Individuals in Finesse Bold, Sports in Nouveau Gothic Bold, and Clubs in Muse Script.

Ads were produced by Ginger Glenn with the assistance of all businesses who contributed to the Cougar Pinnacle.

This year's advisor was Ms. Erin Wigginton, the Editor-in-Chief was Ginger Glenn.

Members of the staff would like to thank Ms. Erin Wigginton, Ginger Glenn, Ms. Suzanne Steele (proofreader), Mr. Ben Smith, Mr. Jerry Steely, Olan Mills, Kim Nelson at the Southwest Times, and all contributing businesses. Thanks also to everyone who contributed time, effort, and support to this year's publication.

The 1999 Cougar Pinnacle is copyrighted and cannot be reproduced without the written permissions of Erin Wigginton or an administrator at Pulaski County High School.
